Major Transportation Tie-Up Faces Island

PROCEDURE WRANGLE STALLS STRIKE TALKS

MONTREAL (CP)—Negotiators met today for the first time in more than a week in an attempt to settle the Air Canada strike, but the talks broke off after less than 15 minutes when the bargainers were unable to agree on an agenda.

They planned to hold separate caucus sessions and get together again later in the day.

Charles Eyre, chief Air Canada negotiator, said the talks were broken off to allow the two sides "to consider procedure" and decide what issues should be discussed first.

Fighting Traps Village

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The mountain village of Hasbaya in southern Lebanon, hard by the Israeli border, is under siege by about 2,000 Syrian-backed Arab guerrillas, government sources in Beirut said today.

Lebanese troops have been locked in combat for several days with guerrillas of the Al Saika group, affiliated with neighboring Syria's governing Baath party.

The clashes have increased steadily and reached a peak Tuesday in a day-long clash. A Beirut communique said at least one Lebanese soldier was killed in the battle which raged near the town of Kater Rikha about seven miles from Hasbaya.

For the first time the Lebanese army identified its opponents as "non-Palestinian armed groups," leading to speculation that the guerrillas were Syrian infiltrators.

Hasbaya lies in a strategic region of south Lebanon which the guerrillas have tried to turn into a launching area for forays into Israel.

The Lebanese army communique places the blame for the latest clashes squarely on the Al Saika — Thunderbolt — organization. Lebanese say their prisoners have all been non-Palestinians and at least one of the guerrilla dead is from the Syrian port of Latakia.

CRITICIZE GOVERNMENT

Renewed fighting in the south touched off angry Lebanese press attacks against the Baathist regime in Syria.

"Our army repulses another Syrian aggression," headlined one newspaper. Another branded the Syrian guerrillas as "snakes."

The leftist Al Shaab newspaper called for a summit conference between Syria and Lebanon to discuss the border tension.

Al Saika has denied it is involved in the fighting and called for a commission of the Lebanese army and guerrilla groups to investigate the clashes.

Lebanon is trying to hammer out an agreement with the guerrilla movement over its demands to use Lebanon as a base.

RIOT KILLED 18

Two weeks ago some of Lebanon's 160,000 Palestinian refugees demonstrated in support of the guerrillas, and in rioting that resulted 18 persons were killed and more than 100 injured. The riots led to the resignation of Premier Rashid Karami, and the country is still without a new government.

Al Fatah, most powerful of the Arab commando organizations, warned Lebanon to "lift the siege around Palestine refugee camps," free imprisoned supporters of the movement and let Palestinian guerrillas operate unhampered from Lebanese soil. The warning was broadcast from Cairo Tuesday following a Lebanese army announcement that it would take "military deterrent measures" against the guerrillas in Lebanon.

Meanwhile, an Israeli army spokesman reported a two-hour artillery battle Tuesday one mile southeast of the Sea of Galilee. He said Jordanian rocket and mortar fire was directed at settlements near Tel Qazir and Israeli guns fired back.

Bus, Ferry Halt Possible

Possibility of a giant transportation tie-up hangs over Vancouver Island like a black cloud today.

Cessation of Air Canada services April 20 was a blow to vacationers and businessmen alike—but generally alternate travel routes appeared.

Now an additional airline stoppage and crippling halts in bus service and even ferry service are being discussed and official hand-wringing is beginning among travel-sensitive Victorians.

Looming large is the possibility of a black summer in this emerging picture:

● Air Canada negotiators and negotiators for the machinists union are bogged down on wage issues.

● CP Air machinists, following a breakdown in their contract talks, have applied for a conciliation board. No strike vote has been called and could not take place until Ottawa decides against a board, or a board report has been made and rejected—which would take at least two weeks. But with CP Air bearing the brunt in Air Canada's absence from the skies, the union has a tactical advantage which could bring matters soon to a head.

● There is a real threat of a strike of Vancouver Island Coach Lines drivers following a breakdown in negotiations April 23. A strike could result after May 15.

● There are continuing murmurs of strike or slowdown in the B.C. Ferry Service. Dissatisfaction remained after settlement of a strike last year because the union claims the government has not fully honored commitments for wage parity with private coastwise shipping lines.

Victoria's location on an island gives any such threats greater substance.

'Would Be Virtually Isolated'

Victoria Visitors' Bureau reported that so far the Air Canada strike has had little effect on tourists arriving here because most come by car and ferry. Spokesmen concede a ferry strike would be disastrous—and a bus strike crippling.

Chamber of Commerce president Claire Copeland said "If all the things that could happen do happen, we will be virtually isolated . . . but it's hard to comment right now."

Two airlines serving Victoria during the Air Canada emergency say they are experiencing a growing acceptance by travellers. Neither would be greatly affected by a CP Air strike but both would be snowed under in event of a ferry or bus service interruption.

Staron Flight is operating 10 flights a day out of Patricia Bay and has doubled its passenger load in recent days. The airline says it has 20 aircraft and can call in reserves.

Air West Airlines, operating from Inner Harbor, says it operates 10 flights each way daily to Vancouver and almost all at capacity. If the connecting CP Air cross-Canada flights are stopped Air West sees little reduction in demand for its service. It has three extra planes at Nanaimo it could put in service to the mainland.

Trains Operate Near Capacity

Canadian Pacific Railway at Vancouver says a CP Air strike would find CPR able to take more traffic but not all that could be expected. CPR operates only one train a day in and out of Vancouver on trans-Canada service. They have few reserves a spokesman said.

Canadian National Railways says it has been running trains with three extra cars for the past 1½ weeks and at this point it is unable to speculate whether it could handle more traffic in event of a CP Air strike.

CP Air officials say they have been handling 50 per cent more bookings from Victoria since the cessation of Air Canada Services. But they are unable to take bookings beyond a week hence.

If they should be struck they believe many persons would continue to fly east via U.S. departure points, on other lines.

(The airline recommends that persons wishing to book flights to the east should do so in evening rather than daylight hours, for best service. Calls made to CP Air here are received in the Vancouver offices.)

Air Canada local manager Stan Mooney said he estimates that 80 per cent of Victoria's air travellers are getting to their destinations with minimum difficulty while Air Canada is out of service.

"But if the ferries and buses go out . . . Lord knows."

He said Air Canada in May usually boards 10,000 passengers a month out of Victoria. About 75 per cent are destined for Vancouver or local B.C. Points. About 2,500 book for trans-Canada or trans-Atlantic flights. The bulk of these would be blocked in their travel plans in event of a CP Air Strike, he believed.

Land-Bank Proposal 'Not a Dead Issue'

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The new minister responsible for federal housing policy plans a series of meetings with provincial ministers and officials to discuss federal-provincial co-operation in the housing field.

Robert Andras, minister without portfolio who took over responsibility for housing in Monday's cabinet changes, said he expected the talks with the provinces to take in the controversial proposal for land banks raised by the housing task force led by former transport minister Paul Hellyer.

Although the prime minister's opposition to unconstitutional direct federal loans to the municipalities to buy and service land was one of the major reasons for Hellyer's resignation from the cabinet, Andras said the land-banks proposal was "not a dead issue."

LOAN TO PROVINCE

But he indicated that if it were taken up and agreed on with the provinces it would probably take the form of federal loans made through the provincial governments, rather than directly to the municipalities, and would provide for a federal voice in deciding how the money was used.

Andras indicated in the Commons that the long-awaited statement of federal public housing and urban renewal policy, up in the air since the publication of the Hellyer task force report in January, would be made public when legislation to amend the National Housing Act goes before the Commons.

This is now expected to be late this month or early in June. The housing act amendments are now scheduled for debate after the official languages bill, which has first priority after the omnibus Criminal Code amendments, now held up by a Creditiste filibuster.

HOLD MEETINGS

Andras said he was arranging meetings with the provincial ministers responsible for housing because "I just want to meet them, to get to talk to them, and talk to the administrative heads of the various housing agencies."

Housing, he said, was so much a provincial field of

MARIJUANA OBSCURES MORE SERIOUS PROBLEMS

The major problem in drug abuse by youngsters and teenagers is not the "hard" drugs such as heroin but their involvement with "soft" drugs.

The drug used in a particular part of the country varies depending on supply, current fad and the age of the persons involved.

Writer Keith Kincaid, in his second article on drug use in Canada, on Page 3, finds that the marijuana issue has obscured the more serious problem of amphetamines and barbituates.

Police Smash Student Sit-In

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New Hampshire and Vermont state police broke down the doors of the Dartmouth College administration building in Hanover, N.H., today and dragged, carried and escorted about 60 students from the building.

Meanwhile, in Lafayette, Ind., about 600 students "camped-in" at Purdue University's Memorial Union after state police cleared them from the administration building, only 16 hours after police ended an earlier sit-in with 229 arrests.

At Dartmouth, the helmeted police did not carry clubs and no injuries were reported.

The students, led by members of Students for a Democratic Society, seized the building Tuesday, evicted school officials and nailed the doors shut. The protesters sought an immediate end to Reserve Officer Training Corps program on campus.

The students were taken by bus to nearby Lebanon for arraignment.

Dartmouth trustees got a court injunction ordering the students to leave and forbidding them to block the building's entrances. A deputy sheriff told the protesters they had until 9 p.m. to clear out, but the deadline passed with no change in the situation.

CLEAR 300 STUDENTS

State troopers cleared 300 students from the Purdue administration building, firing a can of chemical Mace to lear the doorway. The protesters moved to the union, joining others already there.

Purdue officials backed down on an earlier decision and agreed to leave the union open all night. Many of the students there said they sought amnesty for the 229 arrested in the first sit-in, which was a protest over tuition increases.

The arrests came five hours before a convocation marking Purdue's 100th anniversary. About 350 raised clenched fists and walked silently from the convocation as President Frederick L. Hovde began to speak.

In New York, City College opened for the first time in two weeks and most of the 12,000 day students attended classes, amid some vandalism by groups of white radicals. But classes for 8,000 night students were cancelled by President Buell G. Gallagher because of "an air of tension on campus."

Retail Drug Price Talks Likely

DAWSON CREEK, B.C. (CP)—Dan Campbell, British Columbia welfare minister, says Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford is anxious to call a federal-provincial conference on retail drug prices.

"Mr. Basford has indicated he wishes to review thee ntire delivery system at the retail level in B.C. and elsewhere in Canada," Mr. Campbell added in an interview.

Code Filibuster Stalls Several Gov't Measures

OTTAWA (CP) — Some legislation the government hoped to clean up before the June 27 parliamentary recess now will be put over until the fall because of the drawn-out debate by Creditiste MPs on amendments to the Criminal Code.

Government House Leader Donald Macdonald said in an interview Tuesday night that no decision has been made on what measures will be postponed.

But with only 18 days left for debate on government business, something would have to go, Mr. Macdonald said.

In the Commons earlier Tuesday, Mr. Macdonald said that priority items to be debated after the "extensive filibuster" on the Criminal Code bill are the government's official languages bill and amendments to the National Housing Act.

Creditiste MPs who want the government to shelve the Criminal Code changes because of clauses on homosexuality and abortion, have kept the measure before the House almost continuously since Easter.

Debate now is swirling about the sections that would permit abortion where the health of a pregnant woman is in danger. Abortion alone had tied up House business for the last two weeks.

To his embarrassment, a Liberal back-bencher helped prolong the debate with an amendment. It would allow abortion only when continued pregnancy would endanger the mother's life or seriously and directly impair her health.

Warren Allmand (L—Montreal Notre-Dame-de-Grace) said he regretted his amendment would be used by the Creditistes "as a pretext for carrying on further their filibuster."

He said their stand on the bill is "deplorable and I feel they are acting most undemocratically and are paying lip service only to the principles of democracy."

Charles-Arthur Gauthier (Creditiste—Roberval) said some of his party's MPs would support Mr. Allmand despite "his unkind words about us" and despite the fact that it didn't go as far as Creditistes thought it should.

After five Liberal MPs said they would vote for the amendment, Justice Minister John Turner said he rejected it because its wording is not as effective as the government's in limiting abortions.

SIX KILLED AS U.K. TRAIN JUMPS TRACKS

MORPETH, Eng. (Reuters) — An express train headed for Scotland jumped the rails early today, killing six passengers and injuring more than 100.

Rescuers worked through the night to free people trapped in the twisted wreckage of the London-to-Aberdeen express, which was derailed at Morpeth Station in Northumberland County.

Medical Journal Attacked: Pushing Condemned Drugs

WASHINGTON (WP) — Two medical scientists and Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D—Wis.) joined Tuesday in an unusual attack on the American Medical Association for accepting advertisements for drugs condemned by the National Academy of Sciences - National Research Council.

The criticism came at a Senate monopoly subcommittee hearing on prescription products that combine two or more drugs in fixed ratios. Such mixtures account for 83 of the 200 drugs most often prescribed.

The scientists — professors William M. M. Kirby of the University of Washington in Seattle and Heinz F. Eichenwald of the University of Texas in Dallas — headed two of the five NAS-NRC panels that evaluated the efficacy of about 90 antibiotic combinations. The Food and Drug Administration has made initial moves to end marketing of the products, which have been sold at least since 1962.

NO BENEFITS

All 30 members of the five panels agreed that the antibiotic combinations have no benefit over their ingredients used singly; at least double the risk of adverse reactions, some of which are serious or fatal; have no place in rational therapy and should not be sold.

Yet the discredited combinations continue to be massively prescribed. The witnesses testified that advertising and promotion is the primary explanation.

Dr. Kirby cited the case of Panalba, an Upjohn antibiotic combination with sales as high as $20 million a year. Panalba combines tetracycline with novobiocin, which five out of six NAS-NRC panelists said should be taken off the market on safety grounds.

Displaying two recent full-page Panalba ads in the AMA journal, Dr. Kirby said:

IMPLIED EMDORSEMENT

"In comparison with the occasional negative statements made by antibiotic experts, the positive message of this advertisement is brought repeatedly to the attention of the practising physician, and with the additional incentive of an implied endorsement, it is not surprising that the product is widely used."

Nelson said the ads voilate the AMA's own code for acceptance of ads. The code says that "testimonials" for a drug are not "acceptable evidence." He and the witnesses emphasized that no controlled studies for drugs such as Panalba ever have been produced.

Extremists Free Under Amnesty

BELFAST (AP) — Rev. Ian Paisley, Northern Ireland's leading Protestant extremist, emerged from jail Tuesday night with a conciliatory promise to "give the new government a chance to get the country back to normal."

Paisley was among the first to be freed under an amnesty declared for all political prisoners arrested during the last eight months of clashes between Roman Catholic civil rights demonstrators and military Protestants.

The amnesty was the first major step taken by Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark in a "bid to wipe the slate clean" and pacify Northern Ireland's warring factions.

Paisley, released after serving two months of a six-month sentence for unlawful assembly, warned that "we are not capitulating to anyone."

"If there is a need for further demonstrations, then they will have to take place," he said.

Paisley's top aide, Maj. Ronald Bunting, also was freed from a sentence for unlawful assembly, resisting arrest and assault.

WON RC SUPPORT

The government action won the support of Roman Catholic civil rights leaders also.

"The government has got off to a very good start," said Brian Grogarty, chairman of the Northern Ireland Civil Rights Association. John Patton of the Londonderry Citizens Action Committee said the government had adopted "a most sensible attitude."

The amnesty affected 133 persons, some of them in jail and others still awaiting trial. Chichester-Clark said it did not extend to persons charged with sabotage.

Among those who will not have to go to trial is Bernadette Devlin, the 22-year-old civil rights leader who was elected to the British House of Commons last month. A breach-of-the-peace charge was pending against her.

. . . LAND-BANK

responsibility that the federal government had to make sure it was in touch with the way the provinces felt and with their priorities.

The minister said he did not believe housing legislation had been either accelerated or held up as a result of the resignation of Hellyer as responsible minister.

He denied that the federal government had speeded up action on the housing act amendments to make a show of action after Hellyer left the cabinet.

AMENDMENTS

The amendments now on the Commons order paper would lengthen to 40 years from 35 the maximum payment period for an NHA mortgage, raise the mortgage maximum to $25,000 from $18,000 on new houses and to $18,000 from $10,000 on existing housing, grant National Housing Act loans on condominium housing, on student hostels and on renovation of old housing, remove the ceiling on NHA interest rates and increase to $15 billion from $11 billion to over-all ceiling on total NHA loans outstanding at one time.

Andras said he would not commit himself on the land-bank proposal which Hellyer felt would be the greatest single contribution to lowering the cost of housing in Canada.

The former transport minister said loans to municipalities to enable them to buy and service land would reduce the cost of housing upwards of $1,000 on a single-family house.

But the new minister said that although provision for land-bank financing would not be in the current housing act amendments the idea was still being discussed with the provinces.

Some provinces strongly favored the idea of some form of federal financing for buying and servicing land, he said, but others had different priorities.

He indicated that if the federal government pursued the proposal it would make the loans through the provincial governments, but with some federal strings attached, rather than directly to the municipalities.

The Hellyer task force report recommendation of direct federal loans to the municipalities raised strong objections from many provincial governments, particularly that of Ontario.

Teaching Veteran Knew Tales Of Naval Chase

Thomas S. Whittemore, 76, for 38 years a member of the Oak Bay secondary School teaching staff and one-time principal, died Tuesday evening in the DVA Hospital, where he had undergone treatment for several months.

His service bridged the eras from the old brown shingle high school located where the Oak Bay Municipal Hall now stands, to the spreading complex at Cranmore Road. An expert maths teacher, he showed a continuing interest in the school's soccer teams, directing their schedule and coaching in an earlier day.

With the Royal Navy in the First World War, he possessed a fund of information on the chase of the German raider Emden from its location and pursuit in the vicinity of the Falkland Islands.

In recent years he had been an active member of St. Mary's Men's Guild and the Uplands Golf Club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Florence Whittemore, a daughter, Mrs. P. W. (Sheila) Laundy of North Vancouver, a son, Thomas E. of Redwood City, California, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted Friday at 1:30 in St. Mary's Church, Elgin Road, by Ven Hywel J. Jones. Cremation will follow.

It's No-No For An-An And Chi-Chi

LONDON (Reuters) — The Russian giant panda An-An will return to Moscow May 21 without having mated with London Zoo's Chi-Chi.

An-An arrived in London in August. Despite giving An-An hormones the two pandas did not mate.

A London Zoo spokesman said:

"Although the primary object of An-An's visit to London has not been achieved, the unique opportunity of observing two giant pandas together has been presented — an opportunity which may never occur again."

Victoria College Men Appointed Department Heads

Two former Victoria College students have been named to acting charimanship in the University of Victoria's departments of classics and political science.

Prof. Neil Swainson takes over the political science department from Prof. Ronald Cheffins who will remain in the faculty to teach and conduct research.

Prof. Geoffrey Archbold replaces Prof. Peter Smith during his one year's leave of absence from the classics department.

Uvic Students To Guide Tours

Fifty University of Victoria students will promote tourism this summer . . . and earn a little money in the doing.

Beginning May 15, the students will operate from two kiosks, at Douglas and Hillside, and Government at Humboldt.

One of the group, Miss Ann Rochfort explains, "We will take groups of tourists on tours lasting about two hours. The charge will be eight dollars, a part of which we will keep for ourselves."

The guide corps is the brainchild of Rev. Walter Donald, youth-community worker for radio station CFAX.

He was present Tuesday when the students met with a group of Greater Victoria business men to outline the project.

He said that if 10 per-cent of Victoria's tourists could be persuaded to remain an extra day it would mean an increased revenue of $3,400,000 this year.

Full of enthusiasm, the young guides have bought their own uniforms . . . scarlet windbreakers, white shirt and blue scarf. The girl swill also wear blue knee-length stockings, and red, white and blue tam o'shanters.

City archivist Ainslie Helmcken began training the guides in the facts and lore of Victoria weeks ago.

The group has imported Francois Fortier, Quebec City, president of the Laval University Student Guide Service, which has been operating in Qubec City for 22 years. He will give them tips on the guide business.

Rev. Donald said 100,000 brochures are ready for distribution aboard provincial ferries and at other points.

The B.C. Automobile Association is mentioning the new service in 500,000 of its own pamphlets.

Victoria tourist's business was estimated at $52,000,000 out of a provincial total of $345,800,000.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Tofino on the west coast set a record maximum temperature Tuesday for the day with 68 degrees. Skies continued clear overnight in most regions as the ridge of warm air maintains its position over the province. The area of exception was most of the north coast where cloud has persisted as that region continues affected by a series of weak Pacific disturbances. No change is expected through Thursday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

If someone in your family is suffering from heart disease you may already know that weather can affect his well-being. When the weather turns suddenly colder or awfully warm, the heart patient may not feel so good.

Doctors who have studied how people react to weather say there is a definite effect from chilling of the body of a heart patient. The cooling of the outer parts of the body may causee a grater stress on the heart.

Breathing of very cold air while walking places a heavy burden on you heart-lung system. When those who have insufficiencies of the coronary arteries which supply the heart with blood walk fast against a cold wind, they may get chest pains.

Current Fad Dictates What Drug Is Popular

"Hard" narcotics are not a major problem in drug abuse among young Canadians, but involvement with "soft" drugs is becoming a fad, Canadian Press surveys throughout the country indicate. This is the second of four articles based on the surveys.

By KEITH KINCAID
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Illicit drug use by young Canadians seldom has anything to do with the "hard" narcotics associated with drug addiction—heroin, morphine, opium and cocaine.

In fact, Canada has fewer than 4,000 hard drug addicts.

Today's involvement is with "soft" drugs—intoxicants or hallucinogens—some legitimately used for a variety of purposes but also illegally abused by a variety of methods.

Depends on Supply

Drugs used in a particular area of the country at any time vary according to supply, current fad and the age and affluence of the people involved, but here are the main substances:

Solvents—Glue, nail polish remover, lighter and cleaning fluids and lacquer thinners. Inhaled from plastic bags, handkerchiefs or containers. Sometimes mixed with soft drinks and drunk. User rapidly becomes "high," confused, dizzy and excited. Illusions follow, then aggressive behavior. Effects may last from 15 minutes to several hours.

Passing Out

Most of the deaths reported resulted from the user passing out and suffocating in the bag. Psychological dependence has been reported from continuous use which has also been linked to damage to blood-forming tissues, liver and kidneys. A recent study by the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario also uncovered evidence of chromosome damage.

Lysergic acid diethylamide—Popularly LSD or acid, an odorless, white hallucinogenic powder commonly dissolved and soaked in sugar cubes or crackers and swallowed. Also injected. Moods and reactions are unpredictable but during "trips" of eight to 10 hours perceptions of sight, sound, taste, smell and feel are distorted.

Birth Defects

Serious mental conditions have been reported following use and there is evidence of chromosome damage and possible birth defects.

Similar drugs are DMT (dimethyltryptamine), a liquid absorbed by tobacco or marijuana and smoked; and STP (dimethoxy-methyl-amphetamine). DMT is considered milder than LSD but STP, standing for "serenity, tranquility and peace," is so powerful it is often referred to as a "megahallucinogen." Toxic effects of STP include delirium and respiratory failure.

There is no known useful medical purpose for LSD, DMT or STP and they are manufactured in illicit laboratories.

Amphetamines—Stimulating powders known as speed, bennies or bambinos. They are legally prescribed for obesity or depression. Some, such as methedrine, are mixed with LSD as a means of intensifying and prolonging LSD reaction. They are swallowed or injected.

Violence

Amphetamines create a sense of well-being, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and extreme activity. Strong doses can produce violent and homicidal behavior. There is evidence of physical dependence. Violence in hippie communities is often traced to use of LSD with amphetamines; thus the lapel buttons "Speed Kills."

Barbiturates—Popularly goof balls, yellow jackets, red devils, blue heavens. Legally prescribed to relieve anxiety and aid sleep, but abuse can lead to physical dependence with serious withdrawal complications. Effects are intoxication, similar to those of alcohol. An overdose can be fatal.

Legitimate prescriptions for amphetamines and barbiturates are sometimes abused. In addition they enter the illegal market through forged and fraudulently-obtained prescriptions, theft and illegal manufacturing.

Marijuana—Popularly pot, rope, Mary Jane, grass. An intoxicant prepared from the dried tops and flowers of the female hemp plant. The brownish-green substance is shredded and smoked. A more potent form is hashish, an amber resin extracted from the hemp plant flowers.

Intoxication from a single marijuana cigarette may last from 30 minutes to eight hours, producing in some a relaxing increase in sensitivity to sights and sounds and in others anxiety or panic.

Marijuana is smuggled into Canada and the United States in bulk from Mexico, Asia or Africa and repackaged for illicit sale.

Same Penalty

Much of the public debate over drugs concerns marijuana—which is a narcotic only in the legal sense that it comes under the Narcotics Control Act. This means that a youngster caught smoking one marijuana cigarette is liable to a maximum seven years in prison—the same penalty that faces a hardened addict using heroin. A person caught peddling marijuana could receive life.

Dr. S. J. Holmes, a Toronto psychiatrist formerly with the Addiction Research Foundation, predicts marijuana will become legal if research establishes that it is no more dangerous than alcohol—which many people now contend.

Other Side

Dr. Holmes says marijuana is preferable to alcohol as an intoxicant because it is considered non-addictive, doesn't produce aggressive sexual behavior and is easier on the nervous system and the liver.

The other side of the argument is that use of marijuana may further a climate of drug dependence which could lead to more-dangerous drugs; it leads to a disregard of social responsibilities, and some chronic users are unable to function socially without it. Research on the effects of heavy long-term use has only just begun.

Another factor is that illegal distribution means there is no way of controlling purity and potency, giving pushers an opportunity to lace marijuana with heroin and thus create a market for addictive drugs.

As yet there is no firm evidence that this has happened in Canada, but Justice Minister John Turner says pot peddlers are dealing in heroin and other opiates. "It's coming over the same counter from the same people."

Lesser Penalty

The government is not contemplating making marijuana legal, but legislation has been introduced in Parliament to allow judges to give lower sentences for marijuana use.

An amendment to the Narcotic Control Act would provide for a $1,000 fine or six months' imprisonment or both for first summary conviction.

The marijuana controversy has obscured more-serious matters, chiefly abuse of amphetamines and barbiturates. The World Health Organization says abuse of the stimulating amphetamines has reached epidemic proportions in some countries, and warns that chronic use of amphetamines soon leads to abuse of barbiturates.

109 Deaths

It sets up a cycle of stimulation and sedation.

The Narcotic Addiction Foundation of British Columbia has found that drugstores which dispense large numbers of amphetamines also have heavy sales of barbiturates. There were at least 109 deaths from barbiturate overdoses in B.C. in 1967, an increase in one year of 66 per cent.

There is risk of progression from amphetamines to heroin because heroin now is recognized as a means of "coming down" from an amphetamine high.

"As both heroin and the amphetamines are injected the ritual of the needle is firmly established and transference from one drug to the other is simplified," says the foundation.

Tomorrow: The factors that gave rise to over-use of drugs.

SYNTHETIC MARIJUANA NEAR

VANCOUVER (CP) — Synthetic marijuana can be expected on the illicit drug market at any time, Bert Hoskins, executive director of the B.C. Narcotics Addiction Foundation, said Tuesday.

Underground laboratories are capable of manufacturing synthetic tetrahydro-cannabinol, the basic ingredient in marijuana, Mr. Hoskins told members of the British Columbia branch, Canadian Public Health Association, meeting at UBC.

The clandestine drug factories already turn out cheap LSD and other drugs and information on new drugs is being leaked to illicit manufacturers, he said.

"Thus STP, a by-product of the petroleum industry, hit the illegal market even before the U.S. Food and Drug Administration was aware of its dangerous properties," Mr. Hoskins said.

"If not already the case, I am sure synthetically-produced tetrahydro-cannabinol, the basic ingredient of marijuana, wil hit the illegal market shortly."

ROLE FOR NURSES

Dr. George Szasz, assistant professor in UBC's department of human life sciences, said public health nurses should play a larger role in sex education.

Dr. Szasz said the nurses should be able to counsel and advise children and adults on some of the basic problems associated with sex.

Dr. Robin F. Badgley, director of the behavior science division of the University of Toronto's faculty of medicine, warned the 350 delegates attending that they must modernize their methods and techniques as a sort of "public health power" if they wish to avoid the revolts and unrest evident in other sectors of the community.

Dr. Badgley advocated appointment of a public health ombudsman to deal with problems brought forward by individuals.

ALLARD
. . . to retire in June?

Allard Retirement Doubted by Minister

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—National Defence Minister Leo Cadieux voiced doubt today that there was any foundation to the report that Defence Chief Jean-Victor Allard plans to retire this spring.

"I don't know anything about it. He has not notified me and I'm sure if he planned to retire this spring he would have already advised me of his plans," said the minister.

A Toronto newspaper carried a report Tuesday that General Allard plans to quit after his 56th birthday in June and accept an offer to head the New York City office of the Province of Quebec.

It said he had gone to New York before departing on his present trip to Europe, to check on arrangements for the Quebec office.

Scot Nationals Losing Ground

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — The steam went out of Scottish nationalism today as first results in municipal elections showed the separatist-minded Scottish National party slipping badly behind their Conservative and Labor rivals.

While voting will go on for most of this week, the early trend made it unlikely the home-rulers will repeat their heady success of 101 seats in last year's elections. By today they had scored only a net gain of nine—14 seats won and five lost. The Opposition Conservatives were defeating the governing Labor party in over-all results.

Together with the 1967 election of Scotland's first Nationalist to the Westminster Parliament, Glasgow lawyer Mrs. Winifred Ewing, last year's spectacular municipal victories had appeared to swing the tide strongly for the national party. Their posters began to boast: "Scotland free by 1973."

In Mrs. Ewing's home city Tuesday, where the Nationalists had hoped to win 20 seats, they gained only one. In 1968 they collected 14. The Conservative-Progressive alliance scored a gain of four seats to give them over-all control over Labor in the city—a traditional Labor stronghold—for the first time in a generation.

GAINED ONLY ONE

In Edinburgh, the Nationalists contested 23 seats and gained only one. In Aberdeen, they ran 12 candidates and did not win a single seat. Labor gained two seats in Aberdeen to take control of the council from the Conservative-Progressive group.

The Scottish Nationalist Party has shown amazing growth in membership during the last six years, rocketing to 60,000 from a mere 2,000 in the early 1960s.

A Small Gleam

CURRENT ACTIVITY ARISING on the Arab side of the new military lines in the Middle East, while designed to improve the Arab position in the confrontation with Israel, is in reality strengthening the Israeli position. The continued Egyptian threats against the Jewish state, and the daily artillery contests across the Suez Canal serve only to harden Israeli resistance and demonstrate to the world that the Israelis are logical in demanding a binding peace and full guarantees of their future national security.

The recurring commando raids into Israeli-held territory are continuing proof that Israel would be foolish to make concessions before peace had been guaranteed. In other words, the Arabs' actions are Israel's best argument for favorable consideration from the Big Four and the United Nations, and could well tip the balance to Israel's advantage in a negotiated peace.

A hint of this trend may be seen in reports that the Russians are moving towards a basis for settlement which would see the Israelis retaining certain small areas which were captured in the June war. While nothing has yet been made definite, the Soviet representative to the United Nations, Mr. Dobrynin, suggests that boundary adjustments might be in order. This has been interpreted by observers as possible support for Israeli retention of the Golan Heights—from which Israeli farms were shelled in peacetime by Arab guns — and of Jerusalem, providing Jordanian rights were respected.

The importance of this easing of the Russian position is that it could exert great influence on President Nasser in his approach to negotiation, and also encourage the Israelis to relax their stiff insistence, voiced from time to time, that no captured land will be returned. What the Israelis desire above all is security to continue their national existence. Their retention of land adjacent to their small territory is an attempt to guarantee that security by physical means.

If the same effect could be obtained through Arab agreement, accompanied by iron-clad international guarantees, then the way would be opened to a reasonable settlement. While Israel will not agree to peace terms laid down by the Big Four powers, since Arab recognition must be validated by a face-to-face meeting with the Israelis, such peace terms, proposed as the basis for direct negotiations, might do much to bring the warring sides to the conference table and provide boundaries for the talks.

Delay is strengthening Israeli possession of the captured territories, and weakening the Arab governments which now find themselves almost powerless to curb the popular and independent commando forces which have arisen. But delay is also increasing the danger of a worse explosion, and the growing involvement of Russia and the United States represents a correspondingly greater threat to peace. Clearly none of the Big Four wants trouble in the Mediterranean. But equally clearly, circumstances could draw all of them into the maelstrom. The United States engulfment. in Vietnam has shown how small-scale good intentions can lead step by step to disastrous consequences.

Break the Blockade

THE FILIBUSTER WAGED BY the Creditistes against the Criminal Code amendments may be serving one useful purpose—to point up the need for further parliamentary reform. The government did make some procedural changes last fall but, under heavy pressure, withdrew Rule 16A which would have given it the power to limit the length of debates. Now some of those who opposed 16A are having second thoughts.

Meanwhile the Creditiste blockade against the homosexuality and abortion sections of the Criminal Code amendments has held up other important business. Parliament has been dealing with the Code off and on since January 23. One of the Times correspondents on Parliament Hill, Mr. Anthony Westell, confirms that the Creditistes are to blame for the slowdown. "The Conservatives and New Democrats would certainly have let the bill go through days ago," he writes.

So Parliament must decide: Is it prepared to allow minority groups such as the Creditistes to continue holding up its work? Unless the rules are changed to allow some form of time limit there seems no way out.

When Rule 16A was pulled back by the government it was referred to the Commons Rules and Procedures Committee for further study. The committee has been dealing with other matters but must soon return to the question of the legislative timetable.

Considering the storm it provoked Rule 16A will likely have to be amended to modify somewhat the unlimited power it would have given the government to choke off debate and push through controversial legislation. But some compromise by the majority party leaders should be possible. As Mr. Westell concludes: "A less drastic method of programming the House, to speed up business while preserving democratic safeguards—to prevent, for example one-party filibusters—can certainly be found if government and opposition make a serious effort."

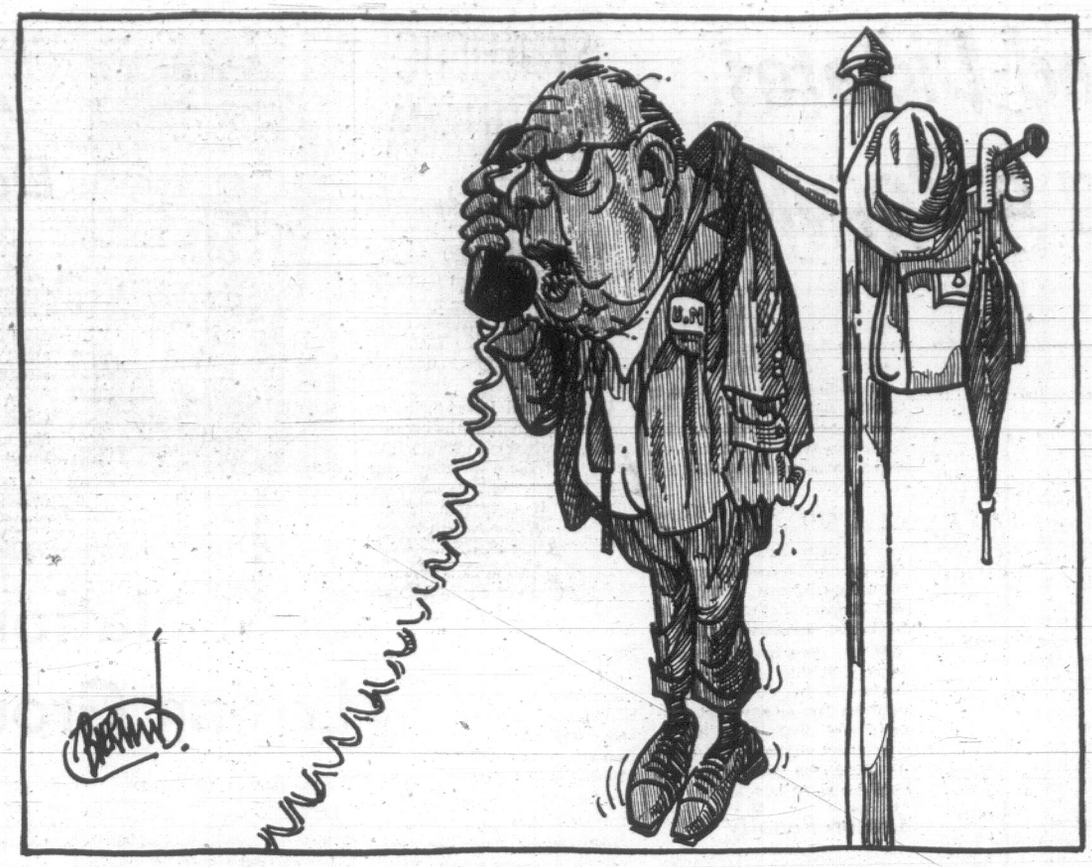
Roadblock in Quebec Education

FROM TIME TO TIME IN DIFferent parts of Canada public concern is expressed over the number of teacher resignations attributed to dissatisfaction with working conditions prevailing in the localities where they were employed. Most recently this concern has been focussed on Quebec where serious losses are expected among the Protestant teachers. The number of resignations is comparable with that of other years. The difference today lies in the quality of those who have signified their intention of leaving.

The president of the teachers' association explains: "It's the calibre. In all cases it's the people who aren't afraid to try something new, the people with courage and a sense of adventure. These are the people we need most to build up our own system."

This is unhappy news to other Canadians who have shown sympathy for the problems Quebec has experienced in its recent efforts to modernize schools. Among Protestant teachers, those with high abilities have become frustrated enough to leave. Among French-speaking Catholic teachers, 40 to 75 per cent of the membership is reported ready to resign if agreement cannot be reached in a current contract dispute.

Other Canadians have viewed recent developments in Quebec's educational format with approval, hoping that they would overcome the retarding influences of the earlier, more archaic form. There would be little hope for such an advance, however, if the best of the non-Catholic, as well as the bulk of the Catholic members of the profession withdrew their services from the province's schools.



"... U Thant speaking again ... I want strong protest notes sent once more to Egypt and Israel ..."

FROM SEOUL — By C. L. SULZBERGER

The U.S. Dinosaur, Big But Inept

MANY Americans seem to think today that their country can be half a superpower or, put another way, that it can be a superpower in Europe while withdrawing from Asia where it finds itself overcommitted. But this argumentation fails to explain how our European allies, who depend upon U.S. will to use its strength as much as on the strength itself, may be persuaded to rely upon our resolution in the West if we make it plain we don't intend to display it in the East.

Sulzberger

Early last year the game of testing our Asian intentions became really serious. On January 21, 1968, a team of commandos was sent across the demilitarized zone by North Korea's dictator, Marshal Kim Il Sung, with orders to decapitate South Korean President Chung Hee Park. The alternate target was U.S. Ambassador William J. Porter.

While this violation of the armistice failed, that did not deter Kim from trying again. Two days later he seized the U.S.S. Pueblo and exposed the reality of American power as embarrassingly inept. Next month Ho Chi Minh launched his famous Tet offensive in South Vietnam, again unmasking the flabbiness of American determination.

Although the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese suffered very large casualties and failed to hold any vital points in the subsidiary battlefield of South Vietnam, they achieved strategic victory in the main battlefield, the United States itself. Washington decided it had had enough of the Indochina war and President Johnson announced his decision to quit a few weeks after the Tet attack.

Ever since, the North Vietnamese and the North Koreans have been jabbing us dizzy while we send frantic signals asking Moscow to please make them cease. Either the Soviet Union has discovered to its dismay that it too is no longer a superpower because it lacks the ability to curb its little friends; or perhaps it doesn't really want to play that kind of game. Judging from the amount of military equipment Russia is sending North Vietnam and North Korea, the latter seems a tenable conjecture.

A generation ago, after the United States had demonstrated astonishing might and determination in both halves of the globe during World War II, there was confident talk about the looming "American century." It is evidently one of the briefest centuries in record time.

Superpower Status

Perhaps this is best for both the United States and the world and perhaps the era of superpowers anywhere is finished although judging from Soviet behavior in Southeast Asia, Northeast Asia and Eastern Europe, it would be well to examine that assumption. Certainly the United States seems to have inherited from Western Europe — source of so many American ideas — the belief that fat-dripping prosperity is preferable to sterner, more old-fashion concepts.

It is impossible to assay these relative values on any national or international scale but one cannot avoid acknowledging that there has been profound change in American public opinion and no American leadership can escape the weakened condition this imposes.

It is hard to fix a date marking the shift but one might not be too far wrong in selecting 1962 when President Kennedy named the brilliant Maxwell Taylor chairman of his Joint Chiefs of Staff. Taylor had recently published "The Uncertain Trumpet" in which he advocated that U.S. atomic weapons should be reserved for defence of American territory by American armed forces, according only conventional support to our allies.

Partners Worried

This attitude may be prudent but it deeply worried our NATO partners and they have never recovered. General de Gaulle's decision to develop an atomic force on the assumption that, small as it was, Paris would always brandish it in French interests, gained credence in a Europe that began to doubt American resolve.

The United States remains an immense giant in the international swamp but wavering and unsure of itself. It is a kind of huge dinosaur, a beast more magnificent than any other but which didn't endure because it didn't know what its purpose was. It was extremely strong and unable to benefit from that fact.

When expressing such views in private conversations certain eminent Americans have suggested they should not be published for fear this might incite leaders like Ho or Kim to further irascibility. "Why not?" I inquired. "Surely you cannot believe, in view of past events, that they keep their eyes closed." Dinosaurs are vastly visible — if for no other reason than the scale of their ineptitude.

FROM CALGARY — By JAMES H. GRAY

The Cowboy Image or Nothing

WHEN a city outgrows its image, or outlives its trademark, should it try to keep either alive? Calgary is beginning to be plagued with doubts about the cowtown posture it has assumed over the last 30 years. The Chamber of Commerce has called a public meeting to debate the idea that "Cowtown Calgary" should be abandoned in favor of a posture more in keeping with its development into a booming urban metropolis.

Gray

Whatever the result of the meeting, if any, the fact is that the cowtown bit has been wearing thinner and thinner in recent years. Twenty years ago, for example, the Stetson "Open Road" hat was the one affected by half the male population. Today one is seldom seen on the streets or in the hat stores.

In any event, the autopsy on the cowboy image is in step with reality for the working cowboy will soon join the muleskinner and corset-maker in extinction. The big rodeo events of the continent—bronc riding, steer roping and wrestling—were outgrowths of what were once work-a-day chores of the cowboys on the ranches. They broke horses by saddling them and riding them into exhaustion. They bull-dozed steers to the ground by brute force for branding with hot irons.

Modernized

Only the most backward ranches still rely on brute strength. Now they drive cattle into chutes and then into squeeze pens for dehorning and branding. Cow ponies are still used, of course, but now they're either quarterhorses or Arabians which are raised in captivity and gentled from infancy.

The unhappy truth is that cowboying has lost its glamor for all save the halfwitted farm and ranch boys. They can make three times the money for half the work doing almost anything else. So there is a critical shortage of hired help on the ranches. There is no way in which the beef industry can compete with any other employer for hired help.

The influx of population following the oil and gas boom has completely submerged the cowboy. He can still be seen on the streets of Calgary, Lethbridge, Nanton, High River, Medicine Hat and Maple Creek. But even in these places the cowboys' hats are likely to be outnumbered by the oil and construction workers' hard hats.

Yet the more unimportant the cowboy became the more frantic did Calgary seem to latch onto him as a folk symbol. Mayor Don MacKay invented the white Stetson as a Calgary symbol. Now this preposterous piece of headgear has been adopted by many of the other western cities for wearing to football games in the east. Nevertheless, despite the Chamber of Commerce, many latecomers to the town have found delight in playing cowboys, even to the extent of buying ranches.

What Else?

But if Calgary abandons its cowboy hat and boots and cowtown image, what will it do, where will it look for replacements? From the fantastic boom in high-rise downtown office buildings, it could set itself up as the financial capital of the west. But that would be as phoney as the white Stetson.

A financial capital connotes a place where decisions are made. That lets Calgary out. Most of the decisions which control its destiny are made elsewhere. Oil industry policies are made in the United States, the United Kingdom, France, Holland and even in Japan. The big financial deals are all wheeled in Toronto and Montreal. Even the high-rise office buildings are promoted and financed in Montreal and Toronto.

So what is left for Calgary? With its art dealers, resident theatre and fine concert hall it might set itself up as the cultural capital of the west. Unhappily, to adapt the immortal phrase of Mr. Charles Lynch, the wiseacre in residence at the Ottawa Press Gallery, "cultured, it ain't!"

Calgary's symphony is so bad that even the Canada Council looks down its nose at it. The once-thriving Allied Arts Centre perpetually teeters on the brink of bankruptcy. Strolling players who fill the halls in Edmonton, Winnipeg and Saskatoon bomb out here. The Irish Rovers, who started here, were bitterly disappointed when they came home for a concert. But even Theodore Bikel drew less than 1,000 and that would have seemed a big crowd to some of the other artists who have been here this year.

It begins to look as if the cowtown image and the cowboy hat will continue to represent Calgary to the rest of Canada. And for the simple reason that it is the cowboy or nothing. The cowboy symbol may be devoid of authenticity and obsolete into the bargain, but it is a recognized symbol, which none of the other western cities have been able to match.

LETTER

Case For The Doctors

I write in an attempt to try and correct some of the misconceptions and confusion arising out of recent investigations of doctors' conduct in two cases that occurred in Vernon December 26 and 27 of 1968. It is probable that the brief statement released to the press by the College of Physicians and Surgeons aggravated the situation rather than contributing anything to clarification or peace of mind of the public.

It should be understood that the College of Physicians and Surgeons of B.C. is the corporate body of the medical profession empowered by the Provincial Government to administer the Medical Act. Under this act is elected a council of eleven doctors. These doctors are elected on the basis of judiciary districts in B.C. by the doctors practising in these districts, and the term of office is four years. The full council meets every two month.

The council of the college received two letters with enclosures from the Attorney-General's Department. The enclosures included a copy of the proceedings of a Coroner's Court in Vernon convened to inquire into the death of the late Mrs. Bernice Lewis. The other enclosure was a copy of the coroner's Report of Inquiry as to the cause of death of the late Mrs. Mathilda Chamings.

In regard to the case of Mr. Lewis: This woman was admitted to hospital because of impending labor at 7 months of pregnancy. She was admitted at 11:30 p.m. December 26 and died at 9:00 p.m. December 27. The matter of concern in regard to the actions of the doctors involved was whether or not a complicated case had received close enough supervision; and whether or not the relieving doctor taking over the care of the patient at 1:00 p.m. December 27 had been thoroughly briefed as to the patient's condition and particular problem. All information was reviewed, including the full public hearing detailed in the Coroner's Report. It must be understood that premature labor in a woman who has previously undergone a Caesarian section carries with it a basic risk regardless of the medical skills available or the equipment and facilities provided by a modern hospital. The council found that this woman did indeed have competent medical care, that the course of treatment followed was appropriate to the conditon suffered, and that the relieving doctor was fully aware of the patients's condition and what might be expected in the way of complications.

In the case of the woman who took ill at 4:00 a.m. Boxing Day and died one to two hours later; the issue here is not whether or not medical assistance could have sustained her life, since it is well known that in many fatal illnesses nothing medically can be done, but was the husband denied medical attention for his wife. The doctor on call had been taking calls all Christmas Day and he thought he was off call after midnight. In this he was in error and no attempt is made to try and excuse this. He referred the caller to the doctor he thought took over from him at midnight, and all sympathy is extended to the poor distraught husband who could not locate this doctor and who received little help in his efforts. Council recognized that one of its members had committed a human error, but did not consider this as a cause for disciplinary action.

The second doctor involved in the same case was called after the patient was dead. He was called by an ambulance driver who asked for guidance since he had arrived at a house after the patient had expired. The doctor, who had been at the hospital most of the night, advised him to notify the undertaker. The issue here is not as to the correctness of the advice, but that the doctor did not in fact refuse to attend.

Despite the tone and wording of some of the editorials in the press and statements attributed to public officials, this letter has been kept factual and purposely non-inflammatory. It is hoped that the public will have a better understanding of the matters brought to the attention of the College and the consideration that these matters received.—W. G. McClure, M.D., Registrar, College of Physicians and Surgeons, British Columbia.

Looking Back

From the Times, May 7, 1909.

South Saanich is beyond doubt one of the most progressive communities in British Columbia. Nowhere else, can one find such excellent public roads, good in all seasons and in all weather. The Saanich people do not make a good road and then sit down in conceited content and smile while the road is being worn into ruts and hollows. On the contrary they are constantly repaired. Council last night set aside $14,000 for roads.

The Funeral Trade: A Dying Business?

Biggest supporter of traditional funeral is the military

By WILLIAM R. KACKAYE

"There's one thing nobody will ever get out of, and that's death . . . there are no extenuating circumstances."

W. W. Chambers Jr., proprietor of the Chambers Funeral Homes in Washington, D.C., expressed the thought in matter-of-fact tones. His occupation leads him to constant contemplation of a topic most people prefer to think of as little as possible, but he's a very matter-of-fact man.

Members of the morticians' trade still recall with distress a remark the late W. W. Chambers Sr. dropped more than 20 years ago in the lap of a Maryland legislative committee investigating funeral costs.

"A big elephant could be completely embalmed for a dollar and a half," observed Chambers' pere.

Chambers the younger has heard all the talk about how the public is about to revolt against the high cost of funerals, but he doesn't see any evidence it's happening — yet. If anything, he says, the bereaved these days want to do a little better for their dead.

Flamboyant Father

The legacy left by his flamboyant father, who advertised $75 funerals in the 1930s ("more than 60 free services"), has its shortcomings in the present scene.

"We got the reputation of being a funeral home for poor people," said Chambers the other day. "Nobody likes to think he's poor any more."

Chambers recalled a conversation with a man who was ordering a more elaborate than average funeral for his mother-in-law.

"I want to do it right. It's my wife's mother, you know," Chambers quoted his client as saying. "Now when my time comes, why you can just bury me in a paper bag."

Survivors Forget

Expression of such a view is not uncommon, said Chambers, but when death does come it is seldom remembered by survivors. They, too, want "to do it right."

There are the first faint signs that some people may be turning to less elaborate — and less expensive — observances of death.

Chambers reported his firm has experienced an increase of what undertakers refer to bluntly as "direct disposals" — proceedings in which the funeral home arranges cremation but provides no other services.

Out of approximately 100 undertaking transactions his firm handles each month, he estimated, two or three are requests for cremation only.

A decade or two ago, he noted, the Chambers company got orders for direct cremations no more than once or twice a year.

Such trade groups as the National Funeral Directors Association wage a steady campaign against direct cremation, arguing in the pages of Casket and Sunnyside and other trade publications that "a body at a funeral is as important as a baby at a christening."

They also contend, possibly with sounder logic, that the "traditional funeral" is what most bereaved families want.

The Wild West

The NFDA is most alarmed by developments on the West Coast, an area repeatedly cited by sociologists as the nation's least tradition-guided and most secularized area.

Most observers there say cremation is a rapidly increasing custom on the coast, although reliable figures are not easily come by.

The funeral lobby likes to think of itself as a stabilizing influence on restless America, a veritable right arm to that old-time religion and a helping hand to those who need to face the fact of death.

Given this self-image, it is not surprising that undertakers tend to regard the interest of some churchmen in funeral reform as a variety of matrimonial betrayal.

Little Impact

Church-inspired reform movements, however, have not as yet had much substantial impact. A number of memorial societies have organized under church auspices, mainly Unitarian, to permit their members to contract for funeral arrangements—as they wish them—in advance of death; generally the members select low-cost cremation and a memorial service in lieu of the traditional rite.

A few churches in Washington have built columbaria, chapels with niched walls where ashes of the dead can be placed, and at least one offers the option of burying ashes in the churchyard. But takers appear relatively limited.

In communities that more consciously conceive themselves as oriented to the future, ecclesiastical critics may be registering greater success.

The new town of Columbia, Md., which is being built from scratch, has no undertaker.

Dominates Town

If the Columbia Co-operative Ministry, the consortium of 12 denominations that dominates the town's Protestant life, has anything to say about it, Columbia may never have an undertaker as they are now known.

After discussion over a period of several months a committee of Columbia residents set up by the ministry last year urged the creation of a non-profit interfaith foundation that would guide funeral practices in the town.

The committee's "funeral practices working paper" proposed that all funerals, religious and non-religious, be conducted in buildings of the religious facilities corporation, which is jointly sponsored by the ministery and the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Baltimore, and that a mortician, working under contract with the foundation, be provided space in the projected Columbia Medical Centre.

By discarding some of the expensive and unnecessary panoply of contemporary funeral practice, argued the committee, the cost of funerals could be driven down from an average $1,000 to $1,300 dollars to a maximum of $300.

While the committee spoke favorably of bequeathal of bodies for medical research and of cremation, and recommended construction of a crematorium in the city, it contended that the customary format of funeral service followed by burial could also be arranged within the $300 price limit.

The committee also voiced skepticism about the usefulness or desirability of many items that have become standard features of the traditional funeral: embalming, extended periods of display of the body, ornate metal coffins, large quantities of flowers, grave vaults.

The United States government is probably the world's most heroic supporter of the traditional funeral. Since the Second World War that "corner of a foreign field" Rupert Brooke alluded to has not been occupied by fallen American soliders.

Bodies Returned

The heirs of 110,666 of the nation's 282,083 Second World War dead whose bodies were recovered declined the government's post-war offer to return their remains to the United States; but the option to leave the dead in military cemeteries where they fell was not renewed in the Korean War or the Vietnam War.

The constant stream of jet cargo carriers that flows between the United States and Vietnam now makes it possible to return soldiers' bodies to their families on a "current death basis," normally within seven to ten days of when they die.

Improved mortuary techniques — preliminary embalming in the Philippines and additional cosmetic procedures at the U.S. port of entry — assure that a high percentage of the bodies are viewable.

If the family of a dead soldier requests delivery of his body to a national cemetery, the government absorbs all costs of the burial. Otherwise it will deliver his prepared body anywhere in the world, accompanied by a military escort, and pay an allowance of up to $500 for other funeral costs. This is ten times the burial allowance the law allotted in 1943.

With all these friends, and an opposition voiced mainly by a few intellectuals and some reform-minded churchmen, who is going to do in the traditional funeral?

Chambers wondered out loud if it might not be the funeral directors themselves.

"The funeral business," he observed, "is based wholly on sentiment."

Undertakers who are not available at all hours, who limit too sharply the hours at which bodies can be viewed, who make unreasonable demands on their clients, are all helping their customers to find ways to get along without them — because the sentiment is strained.

But his remark can also be looked at in another way. It may be the sentiment of the traditional funeral is no longer the one the coming generation wants to express.

Firmer Convictions

Present trends in the United States seem to point to a future in which some Americans will be more deeply religious, other more completely convinced of the pointlessness of religious observance.

The traditional funeral and the assistance of an undertaker help the bereaved to step back a pace from the problem of death.

Tomorrow's firmer convictions may encourage men to meet the mortality of those they love face to face, and take up death in their own hands.

Latin America—A Critical Time

By A. D. HORNE

WASHINGTON — Sol M. Linowitz ended his term as United States representative to the Organization of American States with deep misgivings.

It is, he feels, a critical time for the hemisphere, and for the United States' relationship to its closest neighbors.

As he has said in countless speeches, Latin America has begun to undergo "one of history's great revolutions—a peaceful revolution to overthrow poverty, underdevelopment, inequity and despair."

The United States, as a partner in the Alliance for Progress, has helped raise the level of expectations. But most of these expectations still are unfulfilled. So now the choice is between speeding this "peaceful revolution or—if hopes are frustrated—facing a violent one."

●

"We're at a moment now," he said in an interview in his office at the state department, "when you've got to keep going. I'm concerned about any slackening of our own effort—this could have such a profound impact, just at the moment when they most need it."

He is leaving office, after 2½ years, at a curious time of hiatus in Washington's policy toward Latin America. The Nixon administration inherited from Lyndon Johnson an urgent expropriation dispute with Peru and a succession of heavily cut—"massacred," Linowitz says—Latin aid programs.

President Nixon's first statement on Latin American policy since taking office was a brief off-the-cuff speech at the Pan-American Union in which he was heavily critical of the Alliance for Progress as an economic development program that had failed.

●

In effect, he asked the hemisphere to wait for new U.S. proposals that would follow the much-publicized, much-delayed "fact-finding" missions that Governor Nelson Rockefeller will undertake for him starting next month.

Once again it seemed that, having put off its most urgent hemisphere crisis, Washington was asking the Latins to wait until more pressing problems elsewhere in the world had been taken care of.

Such a back-burner approach is one that Sol Linowitz has worked hard to overcome, both within the United States government and in reassuring the sensitive Latins of American attention.

President Johnson brought Linowitz to the OAS in November, 1966. It was 18 months after U.S. troops had landed in Santo Domingo but, he recalls, "the Dominican Republic was hovering over everything and there was great suspicion—is this an era of intervention?" He is pleased to have "helped restore credibility."

Now the battlefront shifted from intervention to isolation, as Congress began to take out on the foreign aid budget its frustrations against the Vietnam war.

The Alliance for Progress, Linowitz points out, is a multilateral program, almost 90 per cent financed by the Latin nations and effectively regulated by CIAP, the Inter-American Committee for the Alliance.

But, despite President Johnson's pledge at the Punta de Este conference of 1967, America "hasn't lived up to its commitments" in helping fund the Alliance.

●

Last year's appropriation of $336 million was the lowest since the program began in 1961. Mr. Nixon "is right to take a good, hard look at the Alliance," the ambassador says.

The Alliance nations' GNP growth "hasn't matched the 2.5 per cent per capital target, right, and other parts of the world without an alliance have done better, right, but since the Alliance, in eight years, more schools have been built, more teachers trained, more institutions built than in the past 25 years."

Since the Alliance also, some critics point out, there have been 16 governments overthrown by military coups. Linowitz finds this very troubling, but rejects any simplistic solution such as automatic aid cutoffs.

●

"This is the hardest question in the world," he says. "What do you do when a government comes in that is not democratically elected? First, you can't intervene. Second, you look at what the other governments do, follow after a time, and do all we can to move them toward development of a democratic institution.

"We've got to make a lot clearer where we stand, that we're not in favor of the status quo, because we're asking them to undergo a revolution. We've learned that economic development is not synonymous with political development.

●

"We've learned, too, that history, tradition and the way of life in these countries are deeply imbedded, and when there is a shakeup some of them will turn to an undemocratic way, simply because the military is the one group that can take charge in these frightening situations, the one group that has had training in a cohesive way.

"It's worth making the point that even when the military come in, they can't say the goals of the Alliance aren't good, they say we can do a better job of fulfilling them."

He is generally opposed to cutting off aid, and thought the administration's decision to defer the Peruvian cutoff "very salutary. I personally don't believe that aid ought to be a political weapon. Who gets punished when you cut off aid?"

Nor does he advocate an end to U.S. military assistance programs, which some critics have charged with providing support for coups.

As U.S. representative to CIAP, he tried without measurable success to persuade the Latin nations to limit their own arms purchases, and he remains convinced that "we can't play God," that the best way is for the Latins to "agree among themselves that certain kinds of military equipment are no longer required."

●

He also is sympathetic to the Latins' complaints that as producers of raw materials they are at a disadvantage in trading with us.

"I think we've got to do something about some kind of trade preference," he says.

He finds promising an idea advanced by Brazil's former finance minister, Roberto Campos, and a Latin business group called CICYP.

Under this proposal, the United States would give the other developed nations one year's time to extend to all the poorer nations the same trade preferences they now offer their own partners, or else would narrow such concessions to cover only Latin America.

Linowitz is convinced that new leadership is emerging in Latin America "which recognizes the importance of improving the lives of the people, the challenge of bringing them into the 20th century."

"The fact is," he said, "a lot is happening. If we lose heart, then we're in for deep, deep trouble."

'The Sun Shines on My Lion' A Small Artist Says It All

By ART STOTT

A friend who is a principal has described to me his favorite entry in the schools art show now being held in the provincial museum. He is favorably impressed with the displays in general, but one captivates him completely. It is the work of a very young artist—no higher than primary—who signs himself "Alec."

Stott

"The concept," my friend says, "is simple and magnificent. The picture contains a yellow orb and a child's reproduction of an animal. The animal is done in purple and is not very regal. It seems to have only three legs. But the title lifts the work to the stars.

"Under the picture Alec has printed 'The sun is shining on my lion.' Where will you find anything finer? That says it all."

★ ★ ★

I take it that Alec is one of the very little people in our schools—too young for philosophical thought. Yet, through a small spark of genius, perhaps unconscious, he has expressed a universal yearning of all little people, whatever their ages. He has endowed his own creation with its particular place in the sun. By the sheer conviction of his statement, he also stands beside his lion in the sunlight.

Art critics may find grievous errors in the composition. The casual visitor to the show may look, smile and pass by. But Alec has made a deep impression on at least one school principal, has left him with a happy appreciation for a little boy he does not know.

A small gesture, no doubt, yet Alec has raised a direct challenge to the impersonality of the age in which we live. In a world of more than three and one-half billion people, unrecognizable in the mass, unknown to any but a relative few of their acquaintances, he has asserted a simple truth. The sun shines on all of them. The rain also falls on all of them, the cold chills them, the heat scars them. When you prick them, they bleed, even as a lion would bleed, though not his paper reproduction.

In recent weeks, an increasing number of serious thinkers have been drawing attention to that point—the individual human quality of people. This recognition, says one writer, may be the significant contribution of the young generation more generally condemned by its elders for rebellion and revolt.

★ ★ ★

From this appreciation of the rights of others to existence in terms tolerable to them may come the change we have been looking for through centuries of war and conflict. And if that appreciation were ever needed in history, it's needed today. Man's ingenuity has created machines and complexes of machines beyond conception a generation ago. They represent huge financial investment as well as the contribution of brains, brawn, and international organization. Sometime very soon we have to weigh their value against that of the individual. We have to come down to the crunch question: Is the inanimate thing we have built more precious than human life? Can we sacrifice human life to save the machine and remain human ourselves? Do we, in fact, give man a place in the sun, or does he stand increasingly in the shade of his machine?

Maybe this is the story of automation and the society that so frequently expresses the view that automation is for the benefit of mankind, but is inclined to overlook individual man in the miracle of automation. It is an oversight less common among the little people than among some who assume control of the instruments of automation.

There could be an ambiguity in little Alec's proclamation that the sun is shining on his lion. It might be assumed that the sun focuses on the boy's creation to the exclusion of others. It seems to me though—or at least I prefer to believe—that if there is significance in the title, it means that even something as relatively inconsequential as a purple, not very regal lion, makes its claim successfully to light and warmth and that, if this be so, there is a place in the sun for almost anything.

European Money Marts 'Nervous, Hectic'

LONDON (AP) — The United States dollar, British pound and French franc weakened further on Europe's money markets today as speculators bought West German marks on a massive scale in the hope of an early rise in their value.

The pound was near its floor level in London.

The dollar went below the mandatory central bank intervention level in Frankfurt. Conditions were described as "extremely nervous and hectic." The intervention level is the point that the West German Bundesbank is obliged by international monetary rules to support the dollar by buying up all dollars offered.

Paris dealers also spoke of hectic conditions, especially in regard to the pound which weakened 40 points to 11.8515 francs.

The pound opened in London at $2.38415, four points above Tuesday's closing, but soon slumped to $2.3828, just three points above the floor level at which the Bank of England is obliged to give up its previous dollars in order to support the pound.

Dealers and speculators in all European markets said they believe an early revaluation upward of the mark and a devaluation of the pound and possibly the French franc now are almost certain.

Some British dealers laid the recent slump in commodity markets—copper, sugar and others—to selling by speculators in order to buy marks.

Gold, however, reversed its recent downward trend and began climbing again. In the London bullion market at this morning's fixing, it was up 10 cents on Tuesday's closing at $43.47 an ounce. It was up five cents an ounce in Frankfurt but unchanged in Zurich.

Informants in Basel, Switzerland, said top central bankers intend to devote their monthly meeting this weekend to a further study of ways to "re-cycle" back to their country of origin the speculative "hot money" pouring into West Germany in exchange for marks.

But even before that gathering, the monetary committee of the European Common Market was meeting Friday, it was reported, to discuss monetary parities. Any change in the relative values of Common Market currencies must be approved by the committee beforehand.

Few observers expect an announcement of any change in monetary values to come out of either meeting, however. Such changes would be announced by the governments involved and inter-governmental negotiations, believed to have been going on for some weeks, are not yet thought to have concluded.

MP Seeks Lumber Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — NDP member Grace MacInnis (Vancouver - Kingsway) called on the government Tuesday night to work for a "rollback" on lumber price increases.

In a Commons adjournment debate, she suggested the first step might be to urge British Columbia's "lumber kings" to exercise restraint on prices.

Mrs. MacInnis quoted the president of the Toronto Homebuilders Association as saying that the increases in lumber prices had added $500 to the cost of a house.

At the same time, lumber firms were reporting greatly increased earnings.

MacMillan-Bloedel's stock had risen to a four-year high of $36.50 on the Toronto Stock Exchange, from a low of $28 in January, in anticipation of record first-quarter earnings.

Crown Zellerbach had risen to $3,100,000 in the first quarter this year from $1,900,000 in the same quarter a year ago. B.C. Forest Products profits had gone up to $2,609,000 from $1,545,000.

Stanley Haidasz, parliamentary secretary to Consumer Affairs Minister Basford, said the government had already shown its concern about high cost of building materials as well as the high costs of money, land, services and labor.

Former transport minister Paul Hellyer had made representations to the railways to ensure an adequate supply of boxcars to move lumber.

Forestry Minister Jack Davis had held discussions with provinces concerned.

Basford had given assurances that the combines investigation branch was watching developments.

And Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin had made an appeal to producers to safeguard the supplies of traditional customers despite the attraction of short-term higher profits elsewhere.

N.Z. REJECTS PLAN OFFERED BY CPA

AUCKLAND (AP) — The New Zealand government has refused to accept a Canadian Pacific Airways' proposal for renewal of its Auckland-Vancouver service.

The government decision was announced by Transport Minister John Gordon who said the airline could make another offer.

CPA recently suspended its 18-year-old service pending government consideration of a proposal for extension of its landing rights here.

The main CPA offer was to spend $250,000 New Zealand (about $295,000 Canadian) a year on promoting New Zealand tourism.

The CPA proposals were rejected by Air New Zealand as well as by the government.

Gordon said the talks would continue and he did not want to say too much until matters are further advanced.

More Controls Urged On Financial Firms

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is asking Parliament to put a higher fence of regulation for public protection around Canada's federally-incorporated trust, mortgage loan and insurance companies.

Bills introduced in the Senate Tuesday night by Senator Paul Martin, government leader, will permit the near-banks and other senior financial institutions some new openings, however, for wider lending and investment activity.

Richard Humphrys, federal government superintendent of insurance, will be empowered to step into the affairs and operations of faltering firms and put them back on the road to sound operation.

Government officials emphasized, however, that none of the federally incorporated trust, loan and insurance companies is in fact faltering now. The new legislation has been in the preparatory stage for three years and more, and its timing now is not significant.

The bills amending the Trust Companies, Loan Companies, Canadian and British Insurance Companies, and Foreign Insurance Companies acts carry out the second and final phase of implementing recommendations of the 1964 report of the royal commission on banking and finance.

BANK RULES RELAXED

The Bank Act revision of 1967, freeing the banks to charge higher interest rates and make mortgage loans, was the first phase of the operation.

But the 1965 default of Atlantic Acceptance Corp., and the 1966 bankruptcy of Prudential Finance Corp. Ltd. pulling down two insurance companies with it, contributed to some of the tighter controls over federally-incorporated companies.

Principal firms affected are Canada Permanent Trust, Canada Trust, Guaranty Trust, Huron and Erie Mortgage Corp., Kinross Mortgage Co., and Eastern Canada Savings and Loan.

Trust companies will be permitted to use up to seven per cent of their guaranteed trust funds—now totalling about $1,500,000,000—into consumer loans and other investments from which they have been barred in the past.

Some trust companies want to go into the consumer loan business; others do not. They will also be permitted to go into such government-guaranteed plans as student loans, and farm and fisheries improvement loans.

GETS MORE POWERS

They will be able to set up real estate, loan company, mutual fund, and other subsidiaries dealing with businesses ancillary to trust and loan activity. Insurance companies will be given similar new opportunities.

The main feature of the amendments to basic insurance company law is an elaborate plan to strengthen Mr. Humphry's authority over concerns experiencing financial difficulty.

He will be empowered to take control of assets of a company that is in danger of becoming insolvent, and—with a court order—take over management control to put a company into liquidation or back into a healthy state.

The government hopes to get second reading of the four bills in the Senate Thursday so that they can be sent to the Senate's finance committee for detailed study. Committee hearings are not likely to start for at least 10 days, however, while interested parties—the companies concerned—round up their witnesses.

The bills were drafted after exhaustive discussions with the trust, loan and insurance companies, but they were not informed about final details until the bills were introduced.

Subsequent to Senate action on the bills, Commons study and debate is expected to be exhaustive, and the measures may not get written into law this session.

Bellboy Charged With Setting Fire

MIAMI (AP) — A bellboy who made his way through smoke-filled corridors awakening guests in a hotel fire has been accused of setting the blaze.

Police said the bellboy, hired by the Hotel Patricia under the name of Bob Henderson, turned out to be Michael Van Volkenburg, 21, a soldier absent without leave from Fort Benning, Ga.

Henderson was arrested after flames swept up the hotel stairways Tuesday, forcing firemen to rescue some persons by ladder. All 106 guests were evacuated.

Poison Gas Dump At Sea Protested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Richard McCarthy (D—N.Y.) said today that the Pentagon plans to transport across the country 1,100 rail cars filled with Second World War poison gas to be dumped at sea.

McCarthy said the department of transportation has granted a permit exempting the defence department from certain safety requirements for the movement of highly toxic materials.

McCarthy has written letters to defence secretary Melvin R. Laird and transportation secretary John A. Volpe, raising a number of questions about dangers to the pollution and the effect to marine life that disposal at sea will present.

Fourth Generator In Operation

The generation station capacity was brought to 908,000 kilowatts, making it Hydro's largest. A fifth unit is to go into operation this summer at the dam, 475 miles north of Vancouver.

SWORN IN as chairman of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is lawyer William H. Brown, III. The ceremony was held at the White House. He comes from Philadelphia.

Fall Kills Boy

WEST VANCOUVER (CP)—David Hall, 9, was fatally injured Tuesday when he fell about 39 feet down an embankment in a park and struck his head on rocks.

CRITICS FOLLOW GOOD FILMS

SUMMERLAND (CP) — Premier Bennett Tuesday night defended the film "The Good Life," saying "every time you make a good film there are bound to be some critics,"

The premier made his remarks at a Chamber of Commerce dinner here where the film was shown. Opposition New Democrat and Liberal spokesmen have charged that the film constituted a waste and misuse of public funds for political purposes in boosting the image of Social Credit government.

Bennett said the cost of the film is a good investment designed to promote travel in B.C. by British Columbians.

'Strike Pay With Berger; Take-Home Pay With Me'

SUMMERLAND (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett, again denying that a provincial election campaign is under way, Tuesday night said the people of British Columbia have a choice between "strike pay with Berger or take-home pay with Bennett—that will be the issue."

He made the statement and reference to Opposition leader Tom Berger in a speech to an audience of about 300 in the Summerland High School as he continued what he has termed his "look-see" tour of the province.

The premier said, "I am happy to speak to you because we are not in an election campaign."

Amid laughter from the audience, the premier added, "You never develop the harvest until you have first planted the seed and cultivated it too, so I don't know what the press is all excited about."

The premier repeated statements that his government supports free enterprise and opposes the socialism promoted by the opposition New Democratic Party.

He said some outstanding businessmen in Vancouver who had previously opposed Social Credit are now supporting the party and indeed, "they are going to run for us."

"The labor men of this province don't want strike pay, they want take-home pay.

"They can have strike pay with Berger or take-home pay with Bennett—that will be the issue."

Israelis Become Resolved To Prolonged Hostilities

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

TEL AVIV (WP) — Over a period of only a few weeks, a striking change in national mood has swept over Israel. It derives from the realization — unspoken, almost subconscious — that the six-day war may well be a six-year war, give or take a few years.

The essence of the new malaise is not merely recognition that an indefinite prolongation of non-peace is in prospect. Equally basic is the acknowledgement that what exists and will continue to exist is in fact war — not all-out war, to be sure, with armies clashing in the field, but no longer the relatively comfortable cease-fire the Israelis thought they had achieved on June 10, 1967.

The hitherto unexperienced melancholy does not arise from any intensification or improvement in Fedayeen action — although the growing political potency of the Palestine liberation groups, as for example in Lebanon, carries an ominous portent — but from the new fury of the Egyptian forces on the Suez Canal and the now unmistakable clarification of United Arab Republic policy announced by President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

DAILY SHELLING

For 15 months after the war, Egypt's army held its fire, literally and figuratively. Then came two or three separate but intense artillery bombardments across the canal, to be succeeded ten days ago by massive daily shelling. In the last few days the technique has shifted from pounding Israeli fortifications north of Kantara to sharply focused firing at whatever moves along the whole 100-mile length of the line.

But the technique of heavy daily assault is now clear. At the same time, the theme of pronouncements by Nasser and other UAR spokesmen is a reversal of the 1967 results by military victory.

Israeli military analysts do not read all this as necessarily portending a major cross-canal invasion, but they are less sure of their reassuring forecasts today than two weeks ago. They still insist the purposes of the bombardment exercise are to make the four-power Mideast negotiators and the Nixon administration hit the panic button; to make an appropriately fierce demonstration to other Arab states, to the Fedayeen organizations and to the red-hots in their own army and civilian society; and to paint a picture justifying to the victims the recent evacuation of 130,000 Egyptians from their homes in Port Said and other urban areas on the east bank of the canal.

FEAR PRESSURE

Nevertheless, the Israeli strategists worry the situation could get out of hand, largely as a result of Nasser's claims of success. When he declares, as he did no Thursday, 60 per cent of Israel's canal fortifications have been destroyed, the consequence within Egypt could be irrestible popular pressure to follow up, mount an invasion, penetrate the advertised wreckage of the defensive line, and march on Tel Aviv.

Israel's generals have not changed their view that any such attempt would be suicidal and that sensible Egyptian military leaders — and their Russian advisers — must know it. But, they recall unhappily, propaganda-inflamed Arabs have been known to reject sensible counsel and to respond instead to the dynamics of their own emotions. The Israelis, add, incidentally, the Nasser claim is utter nonsense; the fortifications are intact. None of the Israelis killed or injured in the last few days were in the bunkers but instead were soldiers or civilian auxiliaries caught in the open.

MORE PAINFUL ONE

So, aside from the off chance of a sudden flare, the deeper gloom in Israel centres on the long haul — a longer and more painful one than could be envisioned not quite two years ago in the first euphoria of triumph.

The glimpse of the new reality comes to a reporter when, on his fifth visit since the war, he talks to families whose sons are doing their army stint. Hitherto, the talk of the lad was casual, or at least routine; he was doing garrison duty somewhere on the border. Now the tone is tense and the parental anguish shows through; the boy is on war station.

None of this means Israeli policy-makers are considering the possibility of more concessions for the sake of a negotiated settlement. Least of all do they contemplate moving back from the occupied territories to meet the terms of the Arab states.

Youth Role In Driver Training Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A driver-education program allowing young instructors a larger role in training young drivers was recommended Tuesday by members of a national youth safety organization to the Canada Safety Council convention.

Peter Woolford of Oakville, Ont., a past president of the All Canada Youth Council, urged a re-evaluation of the driver-training program to halt the climbing accident rate.

He said youth must have a larger role in future training programs.

Catherine Riggall of Winnipeg, an executive member of the ACYC, said: "Only we can communicate with young people and convince them.

"We need your help however, . . . and your money. But don't dictate to us."

Earlier Tuesday, Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, told the 200 delegates that public dissatisfaction with the news media in Canada has mushroomed in the last year.

He said public criticism is directed mainly against the tendency of newspapers, radio and television to cover only "negative or bad news."

The three-day convention ends today. It is the first held since the formation of the safety council last yar for the merger of the Canadian Highway Safety Council, the National Safety League and the Canadian Industrial Safety Association.

Boys Charged With Robbing Saanich Store

Two juveniles pleaded guilty Tuesday in family court to charges laid after a Saanich store was robbed Monday afternoon.

One boy, age 14, was charged with theft and the other, age 17, was charged with possession of stolen property.

They are to be sentenced May 14.

Saanich police said $32 was taken from the North Douglas store, 3891 Douglas Street, at about 2:30 p.m.

Proprietor Mrs. Olga Dall Mese told police the money was taken from the cash register while her back was turned.

Saanich police arrested the youths shortly after the incident. They recovered $25.78.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, MAY 7, 1969 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

The graceful white swans of Elk Lake are strong in wing and bill. Any person who attempted to snatch one from a rowboat could expect a buffeting and jabbing from which he would be lucky to escape unharmed. But even a touchy-tempered swan is no match for a fast powerboat.

Three yahoos demonstrated that fact last Saturday, to the anger and disgust of our community. As you know, they ran the bird down on the water, then shot it through the head with a weapon believed to be either a '22 calibre firearm or a high-powered pellet gun.

What you may not know is that the female birds are nesting at this season, and that once mated, they seek no other partner for life.

Perhaps we shouldn't give non-human tragedy our attention; but I don't like to think that a noble pair has been broken up for no other purpose than to provide the killers with a Saturday kick.

It was an ugly episode, and all the more so because it happened in the sanctuary of a regional district park. I hope that Saanich, present maintainer of that park, will take such steps as it can to prevent any other bloody-minded intrusions.

★

Ald. William Noel tells me that legitimate powerboat fans who use the lake have been quick to get in touch with him.

One group has promised full support in policing its members, and keeping an eye out for any acts of vandalism. Another outboard owner has pledged his craft and his services for occasional patrolling, and others may follow suit.

Such measures will help, if carried through. But I very much doubt that they'll persuade those who would have power-boating and water-skiing exiled from Elk and Beaver lakes.

As a fisherman who studies to be quiet, I'm tempted to agree with these last.

My personal view is that anyone who charges aimlessly about wasting gas when he could be trolling a line displays more energy than sense. To this spleenful utterance, I will add that water-skiers take up hell's own room with their pastime, and should barred from any body of water smaller than the Great Lakes or the oceans. Even there, they should be required to stay far off shore.

This, though, is a tribal vendetta, and I won't indulge it further. Those who enjoy such water sport do have their rights, and for some time now, Elk Lake has been open to them. Reluctantly, I hope it will so remain.

★

A community with a fine lake on its outskirts can count itself lucky. Possession of this natural gift brings problems, however.

Just how can Elk Lake be kept a good place to go for picnics, swimming, canoeing and rowboating, and fast-motor scurryings?

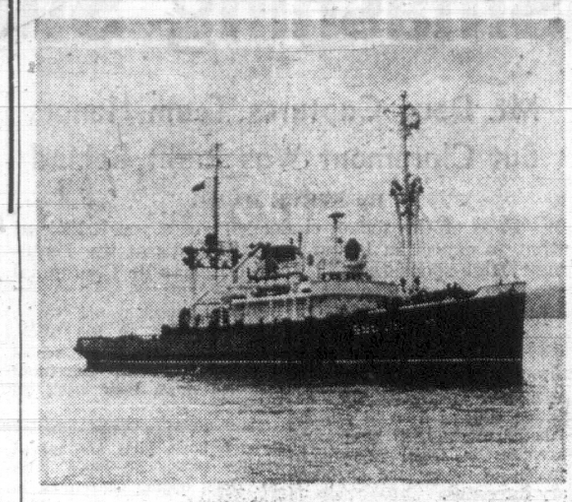
One answer, I suggest is by zoning the water in such a manner that no activity is going to be interfered with by any other.

That's a tall order, but more flags and markers, and a review of present warning signs would certainly help.

In this connection, it's as well to remember that Greater Victoria Sailing Association is clearing a site for quarters out there. Motor and hand-propelled craft will be joined by sailboats in larger numbers than the lake has carried before.

Another answer is, the improved patrolling mentioned earlier. If this can be worked out on a volunteer basis, so much the better for the laden taxpayer!

But when all's said and done, the final decision must go to those who visit Elk Lake in large numbers each year. That lovely park will become pretty well what they choose to make it.



Now Sudbury II will look . . .

UGLY DUCKLING SPREADS WINGS

They're going to gussy up Sudbury II to fit her fame.

Canada's largest tug, largest tug in the Pacific, undisputed champion of western sea lanes, "Suds II" will be renovated from stem to stern and keel to masthead.

They're even going to drop the Roman numerals—she'll be just plain Sudbury the same as her predecessor who first bore that moniker as a gutsy, battered corvette in the battle of the North Atlantic.

Island Tug and Barge Ltd.—the local firm which put Victoria on the charts of world mariners with a new emphasis—said today Sudbury's refit will be complete by year's end. It will cost an estimated $1.5 million. Where it will be done is undecided yet.

She'll have her power boosted to 10,500 horsepower. Her 216-feet utilitarian lines will be smoothed and raked to make a swan of an ugly duckling.

●

Her two 20-cylinder turbo-charged engines and 10-feet-high controllable pitch screws will give her a free-running speed of more than 18 knots.

The new power and equipment will make her capable of nudging, teasing and towing just about anything afloat. Her 75-ton towing winch aft will carry close to three-quarters of a mile of 2¼-inch cable.

Sudbury will be able to cruise 10,000 miles without refuelling, in tropical or Arctic waters, while her officers and crew enjoy air-conditioned quarters.

Her lounge will have stereo and television and her messing will be cafeteria style.

Beneath her lower profile and streamlined funnel there will be wrap-around glass in the wheelhouse. Coming home on a foggy night she'll have two radar sets, radio direction finders and depth sounders. All her controls will be automated from four command positions. Her engineer will sit in a sound-proofed, air-conditioned remote control booth.

●

Island Tug's flagship was commissioned in 1960. Since then she's saved many ships from disaster — Elli, Atlantic Sun, Olympic Plam, Tainan, Lefkipos are a few that made headlines.

Last spring she put lines aboard the fire-gutted 700-footer Mandoil, loaded with a naphtha-like cargo, while she still smouldered and could have blown Suds II to China. She was nine days towing her to safety.

She's brought more work to shipyard workers here than federal contracts have done in recent years. When she steams into harbor after her refit, the company says she'll be ready and able to bring in more.

And she'll look prettier when she's taking her bows.

$14,000 Award To Soldier After Mishaps

Damages totalling $14,000 were awarded to a Victoria soldier in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton found that Gerald Albert Fay, 20, suffered fracture of two vertebrae in a car accident here. The car in which he was a passenger was driven by another soldier, Bryan Michael Clark.

'In spite of warnings and pleas to slow down, he drove, I find, at a speed of between 55 and 65 miles an hour on a 30-mile roadway into a dangerous intersection with almost tragic results," Mr. Justice Wootton said.

He awarded $6,000 damages against Clark and $8,000 in respect of a military accident Fay suffered three months later at an army camp at Wainwright, Alta.

"If he is discharged from the forces, then he should be pensionable owing to the difficulty at Wainwright," Mr. Justice Wootton said.

SAME METHOD

He added that no claim had been made against the Canadian Army for damages resulting from the accident at Wainwright.

"Even if the military authority is not so chargeable, in my view the method should be the same."

(A Victoria lawyer said today the Canadian forces cannot be sued for damages by a serviceman injured while on duty).

Patrick J. Sinnott, counsel for Fay, claimed the military accident was the result of the motor accident because Fay's back had been weakened.

COLLAPSED

"He was required to carry a 60-pound pack during manoeuvres and he collapsed under the strain," counsel said.

Mr. Justic Wooton said he did not accept the suggestion the injuries sustained at Wainwright were occasioned entirely by the injuries suffered in the motor accident.

Fay, he said, was away from his military duties for three months after the motor accident and part of that time was spent in hospital.

FULL DUTY

"The damaged vertebrae were apparently mended and he returned to his full military duties for some months before being detailed to Wainwright.

"The plaintiff swore that his back continued to pain him after the motor vehicle accident," Mrs. Justice Wootton said.

"Until his experience at Wainwright, I do not find that this man can be said to have been restored completely after the first accident . . .

"In short, he had a damaged back not fully healed after the first accident."

The action against Clark over the road accident was brought by Fay's father, Emile Fay, a Manitoba farmer.

The State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company, which insured Clark's car, was represented by Rodney Taylor.

Clark was not represented by counsel.

'Do We Really Have to Put Up With This Mess?'

For $1.50 you too can become an instant expert on pollution.

University of Victoria has published a magazine-sized book entitled "Pollution", containing the lectures of 12 specialists who gave an extension course on the subject last winter.

Its 115 pages include discussions of the types of pollution, the scientific background and the political foreground of the problem.

Uvic geography department lecturer W. R. D. Sewell, for instance, looks ahead to the shape and size of the problem in this province by the year 2,000.

His conclusion: people who have growing wealth and leisure will demand their politicans solve the problem so they can get on with the business of enjoying their environment.

Sewell agrees with Resources Minister Williston's thesis that compared with other parts of this continent "B.C. seemed to be an island of purity."

He also agrees with conservationists who attack Williston for moving too slowly to keep it that way.

"But serious problems have begun to arise in this province too," says Sewell.

"The Alberni air and water problems are well known. Pollution of the Fraser River is a hazard to its own citizens and those further downstream.

"Beach pollution is occuring in many areas, notably in Vancouver, Victoria and in the Okanagan.

"Sewage disposal problems have given Victorians their greatest opportunity for debate in many years."

That debate occupies some of the pages in "Pollution" and Sewell himself sets the tone by arguing that "past policies clearly failed to curb pollution" because the problem cropped up haphazardly and no one cared.

'No Political Payoff in De-Pollution'

"As a consequence there was no political payoff from campaigning for de-pollution.

"Another possible reason is that the approach was too narrow, based mainly on health considerations and fishery considerations.

"Other impacts of waste disposal, such as the impairment of scenic amenities, were not considered."

All that is changing even now in a province of 2 million population with a 37½-hour week and per capita income of $2,500.

But the public mood-change will pick up speed as 2000 A.D. approaches when B.C. is expected to have 4.5 million people with a 20-hour work week and a per capita income of $20,000.

"Increasing affluence seem to bring with it a growing appreciation of the general environment," says Sewell.

"People begin to ask 'Do we really have to put up with this mess?' "

Uvic biology department lecturer M. A. M. Bell, who bitterly attacked civic insistence last fall on proposals to discharge raw sewage through proposed ocean outfalls for Greater Victoria's proposed sewer system, picks up this theme in his article.

He said local leaders have displayed an "inexplicable aversion" to recognizing the changing facts or looking at the probable changes coming over the 50-year life of the proposed sewer extension program.

"That the risk of pollution from this scheme is so great as to endanger the esthetic amenities of our seaside environment seems to be a risk local councils are prepared to take on our behalf," Bell says.

Polio Virus Can Live Nine Days in Sea

Dr. K. R. Thornton, director of Royal Jubilee Hospital's laboratories and a member of a medical advisory committee on pollution problems, casts doubt on the raw sewage decision on health grounds.

In his article, dealing with the medical aspects of all types of pollution, he includes the observations that polio virus "can survive from six to nine days in sea water" along with other disease-causing viruses found in human feces.

Further, he says infectious hepatitis can be spread through sewage even when dumped into salt water.

(Since publication of Uvic's "Pollution," civic authorities unanimously have hailed a provisional permit allowing them to dump 12 million gallons a day of raw sewage off Macaulay Point.

(Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen and Oak Bay Mayor Fred Hawes have demanded the same permission to dump a further six or seven million gallons daily of raw sewage from Clover Point and McMicking Point.

(However, Central Saanich and Sidney civic leaders say they are anxious to provide primary treatment before discharging their sewage through new outfalls in order to protect their citizens from pollution of recreational beaches.)

Although the "great sewage debate" runs like a thread through many of the articles in the university's new publication, the bulk of the material deals with the broader question of pollution's threat to mankind in general.

POOL WADERS DISCOVER DUMMY BOMBS

A crew from the Naval Diving Clearance Establishment, Colwood, removed two dummy bombs embedded in the sand off Coburg Peninsula on Esquimalt Lagoon Tuesday afternoon.

The 40-inch "squid" bombs were discovered by two women wading in the tidal pools off the spit.

A crew headed by Lieut. Thomas Gardner dragged the bombs ashore.

They were later identified as Mark 4 mortar bombs used for practice. They could not have exploded.

Gardner estimated they had been in the water for about eight years.

Appeals Filed Over Ford Will

Son, Cathedral Launch Actions

The 1958 will of Victoria millionaire Allan Douglas Ford, who died in 1967 at the age of 94, was again challenged in British Columbia Supreme Court Tuesday.

His son, John Douglas Ford of Melbourne, Australia, filed an appeal against the judgment of Mr. Justice Wootton who ruled that Ford, Sr., was capable of making a will in May 1958.

A second appeal was filed by Christ Church Cathedral Buildings Ltd. Under the 1958 will, the cathedral would receive less benefit than from an earlier will dated June 8, 1933.

Under the 1933 will, Ford Jr. would have received most of the $1,153,792 estate left by his father. Under the 1958 will (upheld by Mr. Justice Wootton) he receives $50,000 and most of the estate goes to Victoria charities.

Both Ford and Christ Church Cathedral contend that Ford Sr., was not of sound mind, memory and understanding when he made the second will.

'DELUSION'

They also allege that Ford Sr. suffered from a "delusion" that John Ford was not his son.

Ford Jr., who is general news editor for a radio station in Melbourne, was taken to Australia by his mother at an early age. The mother has since died.

Ford Jr. flew to Victoria to attend the eight-day hearing in Victoria Law Courts last January.

Donald G. Cameron for Ford and Hugh Henderson for Christ Church Cathedral Buildings Ltd., ask that Mr. Justice Wootton's judgment be set aside on grounds that:

It was wrong in law.

It was against the evidence and the weight of evidence.

That the judge erred in holding that Ford was of competent mind and understanding when he made the 1958 will.

That the judge erred in not attaching more weight to the evidence of witnesses who told of Ford's delusion concerning his son and described some of his eccentricities.

SYMPTOM

Henderson claimed that a change in the bequest to Christ Church Cathedral in 1958 was "a symptom of the delusional illness" from which Ford was suffering, and not "merely a matter of eccentricity."

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. Mackay told how Ford took them on an outing to East Sooke in 1959. He said he was commemorating picnics he had in England in the 1890s with Sir Winston Churchill and the Viceroy of India.

Witnesses said Ford wore old-fashioned motoring clothing—cap, goggles and gauntlets and a scarf that hung down past his hips.

During the trip Ford acted the role of Churchill while Cameron was asked to play the Viceroy of India.

"Mr. Ford thoroughly enjoyed this play acting," Cameron said. "He was a born actor."

Another witness told how, when he visited Ford's 15-room house in Oak Bay, he came to the front door wearing a horned Viking helmet.

DRAMATIST

Commenting on this evidence, Mr. Justice Wootton said it was evident the testator was "a dramatist and an elderly person of some conceit who liked to impress his audience.

He agreed that Ford had a habit of elaborating and embellishing the stories he told, but added:

"All this, in my view, is an indication of old age and forgetfulness, but not necessarily incompetence. So many old persons like to command and hold the stage and they adopt many expedients to that end."

No date has yet been set for the hearing of the appeal against Mr. Justice Wootton's judgment.

LT.-COL. STEPHENSON . . . as Scottish chief in the early 1930s.

Businessman, Soldier Dies Here at 78

A man who played a prominent part in public affairs and served with the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) Regiment for many years died Monday at Mount St. Mary at 78.

Lt.-Col. F. B. J. (Brooke) Stephenson trained hundreds of officers and men while with the regiment.

He was twice battalion commander. From Nov. 26, 1930, to July 14, 1934, he commanded the regiment's First Battalion. During Second World War years, because of age, he was unable to go overseas. Instead he commanded the Third Battalion, which remained in reserve in Victoria, from Nov. 1, 1940, to April 15, 1946.

L. S. Henderson, 1068 Monterey Avenue, who joined as a subaltern in 1927 under Stephenson, who was a company commander, remembers:

"He was an extremely good company commander, thoughtful of everyone. He'd have the subalterns out at his Becher Bay place on weekends and we'd look forward to those get-togethers.

"He was also a very sound battalion commander."

ROYAL ENGINEERS

Born in Ontario, Stephenson went overseas in the First World War, serving with the 29th Vancouver Battalion and the Royal Engineers.

Well-known in insurance circles across Canada, Stephenson was managing director of Ker and Stephenson Ltd. and a director of the Pacific Coast Fire Insurance Co. He also served as president of the Real Estate Board of Victoria.

Stephenson is survived by his wife, Edna, at the family home, 2636 Currie Road; a son, Brooke, also of Victoria; two brothers, Jervis, Toronto, and Carlton, Lynchburg, Va.

Puppets and Moppets Go Together

By JOHN SLINGER

About 100 elementary school kids sat in a darkened Lochside School auditorium this morning grooving on puppets.

A whole peanut galleryful that had been weaned on cathode ray tubes; that supposedly figure the world turns inside a 24-inch screen; that hopes to grow up some day to be super-cool 10-year-olds; thought puppets were an absolute gas.

They giggled, they howled, they hooted and cheered and booed and hissed like nobody ever told them that it was just make-believe.

"Hey," shouted a little girl with blonde pigtails to a little girl with none as they hustled back to their neat classroom with the printed letters on the wall. "Hey, did you see that princess come out of the cloud of smoke?"

Cloud of smoke indeed. This teeny mouse went skittering across the stage and, Ka-blam! disappeared in a cloud of smoke to emerge as a princess.

And a whole bunch of little girls sitting there in the dark went, "Oooh!"

Puppeteer Horst Bohme isn't surprised that little girls are impressed by mice that turn into princesses.

He isn't surprised that the littlest kids in the front row stand up and scream "No, no!" when Casper the hero is about to drink poison-plant tea brewed by the ugly witch who guards the magic flower.

And those kids know full well if they hadn't been there Casper would have downed the poison-plant tea and would have died or something.

They saved him and could care less whether the thing is make-believe.

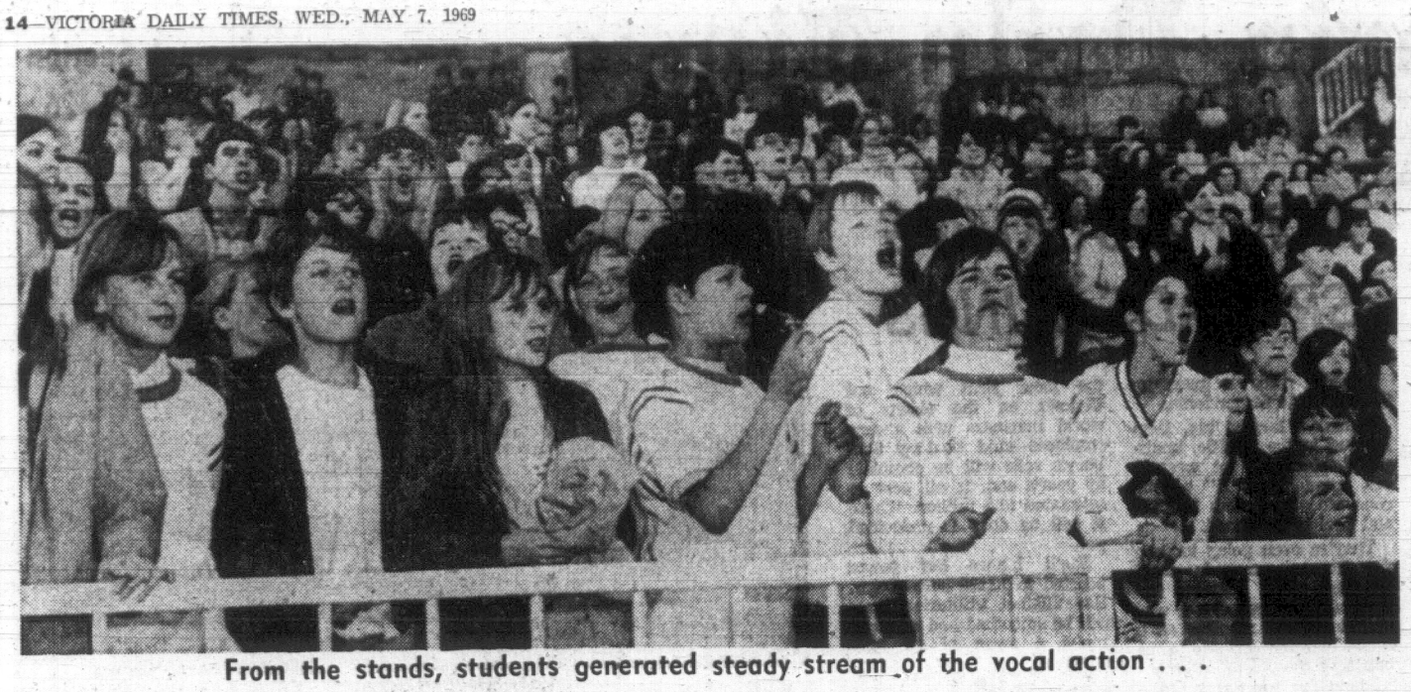
"Their vision isn't too blurred for feeling—for having the feeling," said Bohme, a former Bavarian school puppeteer who is trooping his Little World Theatre around the southern Island.

Bohme and his sons, aged 18 and 19, performed The Magic Flower this afternoon at Sansbury Elementary in Saanichton. Thursday they perform three times at Duncan, Friday it's four performances at Lake Cowichan.

The theatre's motto: "As the sun colors flowers, so does art color life," is as simple as the play which, as Bohme explained to the children, "has three acts. One at the beginning, one in the middle and one on the end."

His purpose in the school tour is to show teachers how involved children can become with a puppet presentation and he suggests that the little dolls — made of socks and sticks and potatoes and paper — can be an effective teaching aid.

"Children learn much faster with puppets," said the German-born Bohme who, with his wife, started the theatre 20 years ago. He estimates they have played 150 schools throughout British Columbia since October.



From the stands, students generated steady stream of the vocal action . . .

All-Schools Meet Smashing Success

Mt. Doug Captures Team Honors But Claremont Was Right Behind

By STEVE HUME

Fans of the school cinder set got a sneak look at what to expect in Island and city finals at the Esquimalt High-sponsored All School Relays at Centennial Stadium Tuesday night.

It was a smash hit preview performance.

Before more than 1,000 screaming fans, over 400 competing athletes from 28 schools labored to establish temporary favorites in senior secondary, junior secondary and elementary categories.

Mt. Douglas, paced by a powerful effort on the track, emerged as the high school team to beat, but Claremont breathed down their neck all night.

The two schools duelled through boys, girls and mixed medley relays all night, with Mt. Doug edging Claremont in four events, and the tables turned in an upset 4x110 relay final.

In the boys 4x110, the two schools finished with identical times of 45.2, but Claremont's Ted Clarke managed to nip Rob Harlan at the tape.

Mount Doug made up for that with flawless performances in the 4x220 and 4x440 relays, clocking an impressive 3:30.7 in the mile relay.

The final difference between the clubs narrowed down to the girls. While Claremont's boys racked up 53 points to win the boys aggregate, Stan Gill's Mt. Doug squads put in a balanced performance, and only two points separated the boys (46) from the girls (44).

NOT OVERLOOKED

Esquimalt and Victoria High weren't exactly out of the running either, as both teams fielded strong relay teams and pressed the leaders throughout the meet.

Oak Bay also may be considered among contenders in the city final.

As Clermont's Ed Kubek suggests: "If this meet is any indication, we should have the closest city finals in the history of Victoria high school track."

The junior high crowd's performance was also worth more than a passing mention.

Teams from Gordon Head, Lansdowne and Oak Bay fought a tense three-way battle all evening, but an impressive boys' team performance won the title for Gordon Head.

Grabbing an early lead, the Gordon Head boys ran up a 43-point total, 15 more than Lansdowne, and their girls finished with 29, six more than Lansdowne and only three behind Oak Bay.

Gordon's Head's male sprint relay, anchored by flashy Sid Chow who runs with the moves of a college sprinter, blistered its way to a 46.6 clocking. That's a time that would be respectable in high school circles.

OAK BAY SHARP

And another impressive performance came from Oak Bay's girls in 4x110. They flashed to a 51.8 clocking that would have showed in senior boys' competition five years ago.

Outstanding performances in individual events came from Mt. Doug's Lindsay Jack and Penny May in the high jump and shot for girls, Vic High's Mike Chornaby leaped over six feet in the high jump, Claremont Ray King battled his way to 11 feet in the pole vault, Oak Bay's Dave Weicker ripped off a 4:22.3 in the mile, and Gordon Head's Rick Holden made five feet seven in the high jump.

MATCHING stride for stride, Claremont's Ted Clarke (left) and Rob Harlan of Mount Douglas hit tape in identical times at finish of high school boys' 4x110 relay. Claremont earned judges' decision but Mount Doug teams gained revenge later by claiming senior honors in Tuesday's all-schools relays at Centennial Stadium. (Times photos by Irving Strickland.)

A Cake, Then Nothing For Willie's Birthday

By The Associated Press

Bob Gibson spoiled Willie Mays' 38th birthday party and Jim Hicks preserved Gibson's 39th career shutout Tuesday as St. Louis Cardinals trimmed the San Francisco Giants 3-0 in National League baseball activity.

Mays, hitting .356 when he arrived in St. Louis, was given a cake by the Cardinals before the game. In the game, he struck out twice and then departed in the fourth inning with a pulled muscle in his back.

Right fielder Hicks rescued Gibson in the fifth with two throws that cut down San Francisco baserunners, and the Cards' ace went on to toss a five-hitter for his first 1969 shutout.

TAYLOR CONNECTS

Elsewhere, in the National League's first inter-division action this year, New York Mets blasted Cincinnati Reds 8-1; Philadelphia Phillies nipped Houston Astros 5-4; Montreal Expos slipped past Atlanta Braves 4-3; San Diego Padres topped Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2 and Chicago Cubs slammed Los Angeles Dodgers 7-1.

Bob Taylor walloped a three-run homer with two out in the ninth inning, capping a five-run barrage that powered Kansas City Royals past Detroit Tigers 7-6 and sent the defending world champions to their fourth consecutive defeat in the American League.

Elsewhere in the AL, Chicago White Sox edged Baltimore Orioles and Cleveland Indians nipped Minnesota Twins by 1-0 scores. Oakland Athletics whipped Washington Senators 4-1, Boston Red Sox clobbered Seattle Pilots 12-2 and New York Yankees squeaked by California Angels 2-1.

Gibson, the NL's most valuable player last season when he finished 22-9 with 13 shutouts and a league-record ERA of 1.12, went into Tuesday night's game with a 2-2 mark after five starts.

EIGHT STRIKEOUTS

He surrendered two singles and a walk in the second inning, survived three more singles in the fifth, with Hicks' help, and then retired the last 12 Giants he faced, finishing with eight strikeouts. The whitewash lowered his ERA to 1.94.

Joe Torre's single and Mike Shannon's ground out delivered two St. Louis runs in the first inning after Hal Lanier's two-base error and a single by Curt Flood. The Cards added a run in the sixth against loser Ray Sadecki on a walk and singles by Shannon and Tim McCarver.

Cincinnati's Jim Maloney and Houston's Don Wilson, who pitched no-hitters on successive nights in their previous outings, were tagged for hits by the first batters they faced at New York and Philadelphia. Bill Stoneman, who tossed a no-hitter for Montreal April 17, also gave up a leadoff hit at Atlanta.

Maloney and Wilson escaped with no-decisions as the Mets cuffed the Reds with four homers and the Phils downed the Astros on a ninth inning blast by rookie Don Money. Stoneman staggered through six innings and squared his record at 3-3 when Floyd Wicker's pinch single in the seventh delivered two runs, bringing the Expos from behind.

TOMMY HONORED

C. D. (Tommy) Thompson, who served 10 years as a league official, will be honored at the Oak Bay Little League's official opening ceremonies Saturday at 2:30 in Fireman's Park.

Suspended Club Rides on Credit

TORONTO (CP) — St. Thomas Barons arrived early today after leaving Flin Flon, Man., where their proceeds from the final game of the Canadian Hockey Association East-West final were seized by CHA officials because the Barons walked out following a second-period brawl.

The Barons rode a bus the 382 miles to Winnipeg. When they arrived there was no assurance they would have plane tickets to Toronto.

A credit was set up to be paid for later by the hockey club. The flight for the 21 aboard will come to $1,197.

The Barons returned to St. Thomas by bus where they will await word from the West. The CHA probably will put a freeze on the club's take from the whole final series. But their skates and uniforms returned with them.

It was reported that civic officials in St. Thomas, led by Mayor E. D. Fanjoy, have started a campaign to raise funds to offset expenses.

SUSPENDS THE BARONS

After the Barons left town, CHA president Ron Butlin of Calgary named the Bombers victors in the series and suspended St. Thomas from the CHA.

The Bombers were awarded Monday night's game, the fourth in the series, when the Ontario club withdrew from the ice and refused to return at 10:10 of the second period.

Coach Keith Kelly said at that time that would not meet Flin Flon again.

Manager Jack Cassidy led St. Thomas from the ice after a second-period brawl in which the teams split, 14 penalties. Flin Flon led 4-0 at the time.

At the airport in Winnipeg, Kewely refused to back down.

"I still have a clear conscience. I did what I thought was right," he said.

Cassidy earlier Tuesday described the Flin Flon squad as a "bunch of butchers." A Flin Flon spokesman replied that the St. Thomas management was "a bunch of kooks."

Yes, Watson, It Was Purely Elementary . . .

It was extremely tense as track situations go, and the fans were going wildly enthusiastic in the Centennial Stadium's stands.

Six runners were all abreast coming into the final exchange. When Ann Stanhope's fine hand-off to Jenny Whitehouse sprang McTavish Road into a half-stride lead pandemonium broke loose.

Ann, oblivious of her position, grabbed her hair, started jumping up and down with excitement, emitting the shrieks of excitement that only an 11-year-old can conjure.

It was the elementary girls' 8x55 yard relay, and the story was virtually the same in every event that involved the 11 elementary schools at the All-Schools Relays.

★ ★ ★

The athletes came in all shapes, sizes and hair-lengths. They ran in bare feet, socks, and big brother's four-sizes-too-big track shoes. They cheered each other enthusiastically, before, after and during races. They rarely let up. Lake Hill won the elementary title and the boys' title, Shelbourne won the girls' events. Somehow, it was incidental to the fun that everybody had.

Without the elementary school teams, "oohing" and "aahing" over the performances of the junior and senior high school sets and ecstatically mobing the awards stand for medals, it would have been just another track meet.

But they came all the way from Sooke and Sidney and Prospect Lake, and they gave everything they had to everything there was to do, whether it meant chasing the birds or climbing the fences.

★ ★ ★

Meet organizer Ron Bowker, who did a superb job of keeping the events on-schedule with clockwork precision, said:

"The little ones made the meet. They're fantastic. I've never seen anyone get so involved in a sports event before."

He wasn't the only one impressed. Coaches from other schools had the following things to say:

Stan Gill, Mt. Doug: "This is the kind of thing that is going to make track in Victoria. The youngsters are having a ball getting right in alongside the high school athletes."

Ed Fougner, Victoria High: "This was tremendous. Elementary is the place to get kids started in track. You have to get them involved early, and this is the best way to do it."

Tom Bourne, Shelbourne: "They should have one of these every month."

★ ★ ★

Ed Kubek, Claremont: "It's great for the little kids. They can get out and compete and get a look at how the big kids do at the same time. If you watch you can see the effect it has on the big kids too, gives them a chance to show off."

Mrs. J. MacKinnon, McTavish Road: "My girls are very excited. I think this should have been started a long time ago."

Savard, Ruel Earn Rewards

MONTREAL (CP) — Serge Savard, Montreal Canadiens' versatile sophomore defenceman, is the Conn Smythe Trophy winner as most valuable player of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs.

And rookie coach Claude Ruel of Montreal is richer — by one harness-racing horse.

The NHL announced Savard's selection Tuesday as the recipient of the award and $1,500 prize, marking the first time a defenceman has won the trophy since its inception in 1965.

The 23-year-old Montreal native scored four goals—one short of the record—and had six assists in Montreal's march to its 16th Stanley Cup with series wins over New York Rangers, Boston Bruins and St. Louis Blues.

HI HO CLAUDE!

Ruel will be presented with the horse Friday night in special ceremonies at Blue Bonnets Raceway.

His players, who chipped in to buy the horse as a gift, figured it was a question of priorities in Ruel's life.

"It's a well-known fact that after his wife and the Canadiens, the coach loves harness racing best," said team captain Jean Beliveau.

"So the boys thought it would make a nice gift for him."

The horse, a four-year-old called Mr. Paul, has placed second and third in two outings this year.

Savard's goal-scoring performance in the 14 playoff games was one short of the record held by defenoemen Earl Siebert of Chicago Black Hawks and Red Kelly of Detroit Red Wings.

Siebert scored his in 10 games in 1938 while Kelly tied the mark in 12 games 14 years later.

Savard's selection also marks the first time that one team has had two winners. Beliveau won it in 1965.

An NHL spokesman said voting results are not released.

Other winners of the trophy have been goaltender Roger Crozier of Detroit in 1966, centre Dave Keon of Toronto Maple Leafs in 1967 and goaltender Glenn Hall of St. Louis in 1968.

Cromptpon Paces Touring T-Birds

NEW YORK (CP)—The University of British Columbia rugby team, paced by captain Don Crompton Tuesday defeated the Manhattan Rugby Club of New York, 21-11.

Crompton got 12 points on a try, a penalty goal and three conversions. Other UBC scorers were Leigh Hillier, Bob Jackson and Bob Chataway.

The touring UBC club will meet the New York Rugby Club Thursday prior to returning to eastern Canada to continue their tour.

Santana Sparks Spanish Sweep

LISBON, Portugal (AP)—Playing his 100th Davis Cup tennis match, Manuel Santana defeated Frank Salmonon, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2, Tuesday and gave Spain a sweep over Rhodesia in the first round of the cup's European zone.

The Spaniards won all five matches in straight sets. They will meet the winner of the France-Yugoslavia encounter in the next round.

Barons, Islanders Roller to Victory

Ian Stewart earned the first shutout of the season as Barons downed Tigers 1-0 in a Greater Victoria Roller League game Tuesday night at Memorial Arena. Pat Phillips fired the winning goal.

In the other game, Islanders defeated Falcons 6-3 behind the two-goal scoring performances of Grant Davis and Doug Olstead.

Rule Changes Promoting Added Baseball Offense

CINCINNATI (AP) — Statistics this year are proving that baseball rule changes enacted for the 1969 season to promote run-scoring have been effective, the National League office declared this week.

A total of 1,217 runs had been scored in 152 games in 1969 through May 4, compared with 999 in the same number of contests last season.

The average number of runners crossing the plate in each game was eight while last year it amounted to 6.57.

Two hundred homers had been hit compared with 186 last year.

Ironically, despite the increase in scoring this season, three no-hitters have already been pitched, equalling the total for all of 1968.

Thirty-one shutouts were hurled through the first 152 games last year compared to 29 this year.

GUAER CANDIDATE . . . . . . AS COACH

Retzlaff Inherits Eagles

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pete Retzlaff, a former All-National Football League end, took over Tuesday as vice-president and general manager of Philadelphia Eagles under a three-year contract.

Retzlaff, 36, who played 11 years for the Eagles before retiring two seasons ago, was given complete authority by new Eagles' owner Leonard Tose to rebuild the club.

Tose last week fired Joe Kuharich as general manager-coach of the Eagles after a five-year win-loss-tie record of 28-41-1, with four losing seasons. Retzlaff's first big job will be to find a coach to succeed Kuharich on the field.

Retzlaff reportedly wants Jerry Williams, coach of the Calgary Stampeders in the Canadian League, but was refused permission by the Calgary board of directors to negotiate with Williams, who recently signed a four-year contract. The NFL has a working agreement with the Canadian League and Retzlaff indicated he must look elsewhere for his coach.

Leading candidate for the job is Charley Gauer, a former Colgate University star who played three years for the Eagles in the 1940s and has been an assistant coach or scout for the club since 1946. He was offensive coach of the 1960 Eagles' NFL champions.

Wilkin Fires Three-Hitter

Three-hit pitching by Barry Wilkin provided the current which sparked Denford Electric to a 3-0 first-start shutout over Hall Rams in Stuffy McGinnis Senior Men's Softball League play Tuesday night at Heywood Avenue Park.

Wilkin struck out six and curbed some two-on-base trouble in the first and final innings for the victory.

Unearned runs in the second and third innings plus a third run in the sixth on two singles accounted for Denford scoring.

ARNOLD PALMER

Slumping Palmer To Try

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Arnold Palmer, golf's glamor boy currently fighting a slump, says he will attempt to qualify for the United States Open on June 3 in Pittsburgh.

The leader of one of the most devoted armies of golf fans in the world failed to gain automatic entry into the Open for the first time in 10 years when his winter tour earnings left him one spot short of the top list.

He said his "golf game and . . . health both are in good shape right now.

"I have no problems with my shoulder or hip," Palmer added. "They're practically healed. I'm driving as well as I ever did. My only problem is my short game."

North Stars Busy Dealers

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The Minnesota North Stars, who finished in sixth place in the National Hockey League's Western Division this last season, acquired three players Tuesday, including one of two American-born players in the league.

Obtained from Boston were winger Tommy Williams and promising defenceman Barrie Gibbs. Later, the North Stars picked up right winger Doug Shelton from Chicago Black Hawks.

Wren Blair, general manager-coach of the North Stars, said Williams was acquired for a player to be named later and Gibbs in exchange for the first-round draft choice in June's intraleague draft—a choice the North Stars got for finishing with the lowest ranking in the NHL.

Shelton was obtained to complete a trade in which Mike McMahon and Andre Boudrias of Minnesota go to Chicago in exchange for Tom Reid and Bill Orban in February.

FOR REID, ORBAN

Shelton, 23, played with Dallas in the Central Hockey League this season and had 17 goals and 27 assists. The 5-foot-8, 170-pound Shelton is a native of Woodstock, Ont.

Gibbs, 20, was voted the CHL's most valuable player and made the CHL all-star team last year in his second pro year with Oklahoma City.

Scots Rally To Tie Irish

GLASGOW (CP) — Scotland, a goal down at halftime, forced a 1-1 draw with Ireland Tuesday night in the third match of the home international championship series.

Alex McMordie gave Ireland the lead in the 11th minute of the first half. But after the interval Scotland and Colin Stein tied the score with a goal at the 55th minute.

Scotland's failure to win was a big blow to their hopes of capturing the championship, which now looks likely to go to England, the world cup-holder.

Scotland heads the table with three points from two games. England has two points from one match, Ireland one point from two matches and Wales none from one game.

In the only English League game played Tuesday, third division Southport tied Torquay 2-2.

O'Keefes Suffer Double Reversal

Victoria O'Keefes, missing four key players in the lineup, lost two others in suffering a double setback Tuesday at Royal Athletic Park.

The Pacific Coast Soccer League club, preparing for their May 14 exhibition against West Bromwich Albion of the English League's first division, was upset 2-1 by Gorge Molsons of the District League.

Winger Peter Wilson was lost for the remainder of the season after suffering an ankle injury, and goalie Kjeld Brodsgaard had to sit out most of the game after injuring his knees.

O'Keefe regulars Ike MacKay, Bruce Twamley, Peter Brett and Dick Joyce all missed the game.

Bill Walker and Tom Somner scored for the fast-moving Gorge club while Bert Soutar answered for O'Keefes.

O'Keefes have invited Barry Sadler of UBC Thunderbirds to be their replacement goalie against West Bromwich.

They also have arranged to have ex-O'Keefe player Dave Stothard on the bench as a half-line replacement.

Next in the series of warm-up exhibitions for O'Keefes is a match against Mainland All-Stars at 2 p.m. Saturday in Athletic Park.

O'Keefes' Booster Club will charter a bus to Vancouver on Sunday for the B.C. All-Stars West Bromwich game. Return fare is $7 and reservations may be made by telephoning Charlie Lewis at 384-2917.

BARE-FOOTED PUNTER, LINEMAN JOIN LIONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference Tuesday announced the signing of two rookie imports—one a punter who prefers to kick without a shoe.

Claude Williams, 6-4, 225 pounds, is the kicker and a two-way end from Eastern Arizona.

Also signed was Ron Vrlicak, 6-2, 250, a centre and guard from Seattle Rangers of the Continental Football League. He was twice named to the all-coast team while at Washington State.

Nine-Day Boycott Ends at Aqueduct

NEW YORK (AP) — Racing will be resumed at Aqueduct today after a nine-day closing due to a boycott of the track by horsemen over a dispute on a proposed pension plan.

The New York State Racing Association announced Tuesday racing will resume today with a nine-race program.

Trainers and owners were being urged by a loudspeaker to enter their horses and end the boycott which has closed the track for nine racing days at a cost of an estimated $4,000,000 in revenue to the state.

It was reported that most of the entries were being made by men who were not members of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association.

Bates Record Second Victory

Three unearned runs and a fine pitching performance by Brian Pearce enabled Bate Construction to down Red Lion Inn 3-1 Tuesday at Central Park and claim the Victoria Major Mens' Softball League lead.

Singles by Jim Moody and Joe Patterson scored two runs in the third inning, and Bates added an insurance run in the sixth inning on a base on balls, a sacrifice bunt, fielder's choice and a wild pitch.

Pearce ruined his shutout in the final inning when a wild toss enabled Derek Stone to score.

This made the second win in as many starts for Bates, breaking a tie with Luckies, who have only played once.

SEATTLE HYDROFOIL SERVICES STOPPED

The hydrofoil service between Victoria and Seattle has been discontinued.

Catalina Terminals in Seattle announced that the service, which stopped after the hydrofoil Victoria hit a deadhead off Port Townsend, Washington, last November, will not be resumed.

The Victoria is still undergoing repairs at the Todd Shipyard in Seattle.

Charley Stillwell, managing director of Catalina Terminals, said the hydrofoil will be operated in California waters between San Pedro and Catalina Island as soon as repairs are completed this summer.

Committee Votes Against Low-Rental Project

Saanich housing committee turned down Tuesday night the hiring of a part-time housing liaison expert.

In other decisions, the committee recommended no further action on a factory-house proposal by a private architect and all but ruled out a 10-unit low-rental project.

Committee chairman Ald. Edith Gunning said "we should be directing destiny rather than just letting things go." This direction could never come without more expertise and municipal staff was already overburdened.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said hiring a consultant would cause staff problems. Ald. Foster Isherwood said he wasn't for or against a liaison person "but we have to know just how far we are going" (in housing.)

The proposal to build 10 units of low-cost housing under the family housing project, financed by federal and provincial governments, was referred to the planning department for a report.

But Mrs. Gunning said later she doubts it will get "very far" because it would need "quite a bit of staff time."

Factory-assembled houses, made in an earlier presentation by private architect D. M. Cowin, received a recommendation of no further action. Mrs. Gunning said "we are lacking adequate sewer sites."

At one point in the evening, Ald. Isherwood joked about the possibility of Ald. Gunning resigning as housing committee chairman if her proposals did not get through.

"Well, I hope 'Madame Hellyer' isn't going to resign if she doesn't get all her housing . . ." he said.

"I might," replied Mrs. Gunning.

Play Politics, Students Asked

Opposition Leader Tom Berger urged university students Tuesday not to run a protest candidate against Education Minister Donald Brothers in Rossland-Trail.

He said it would only split the opposition vote and conceivably could let Brothers win by a slim margin while offering no chance of victory for a student candidate.

Berger, at a press conference here, was answering a question about his opinion of the B.C. Union of Students meeting in Victoria at the weekend which discussed possible organization of a university student campaign with candidates to publicize dissatisfaction with government education policies.

Insiders in all parties have indicated that Brothers will have a tough fight to get re-elected, largely for local reasons, to his Rossland-Trail seat.

DEMOCRATIC RIGHT

Berger said it was for the students to decide whether they would exercise their democratic right to put up a candidate against Brothers but they should realize "we have a whole range of problems in B.C. and the crisis in the universities alone shouldn't be allowed to obscure these other problems."

He said there would be just as much sense in other fragmentary campaigns which could see "the people who want something done to stop pollution run a candidate against Resource Minister Williston and the people concerned about the state of senior citizen housing run a candidate against the premier in Kelowna.

"But we all know enough about politics to realize they wouldn't get anywhere—they wouldn't win.

"It's for the students to decide but if they want to divide the anti-government vote they'll run a candidate against Brothers.

"And if they do that, it will make a lot of people wonder what they've been studying at university—it can't have been politics," he said with a laugh.

BENNETT'S POSTURES

Berger added that with all of Premier Bennett's electioneering postures, if he doesn't call an election this year it will be a clear sign that he's afraid of facing defeat.

He said the premier's performance at a Social Credit rally Saturday in Kelowna is a hard sign "he wants to go to the people in September but if it looks as if he can't make it then he'll find an excuse to put the election off until next year.

"I hope he calls an election soon because I don't know whether he can stand the suspense."

Berger said he believed that Bennett intended to call an election for June "but he decided he wouldn't make it so he's now put the date back to September hoping something turns up.

"And if he doesn't call an election by September it will be because he knows he can't win.

"But he's in a dilemma because if he waits until next year he'll have to face the House again."

Berger said that would just add one more to the string of unhappy sessions Bennett has gone thorough since the 1966 election in which the opposition has been able to score points heavily during the debates.

One more unfavorable session before the next election would stack the odds more heavily against the government and also limit "the premier's room for manoeuvring," said the NDP leader.

Has Hijack Novelty Worn Off?

MIAMI (AP) — Airliner hijackings to Cuba, an almost daily occurrence early in 1969, have dwindled sharply.

The hijackings of a National Airlines passenger plane Monday was the first since April 14, and the first over the U.S. since March 25.

In January alone, 11 planes were hijacked.

The figure dropped to five each in February and March, and to three in April.

"It's possible the fad has died out," J. M. Frazier, head of the Federal Aviation Administration's Miami area office, said Tuesday.

"We know there's been a decline in the hijackings but we don't really know why.

"On April 1 we did issue posters to airlines and tourist counters warning that airline hijacking is a federal crime punishable by death. But whether this has played a part in the decrease is anybody's guess."

The posters also warn that carrying concealed weapons aboard an aircraft is punishable by prison and fines and that passengers and baggage are subject to search.

Another device to cut down the hijackings is a new weapons-detection machine which Frazier said is being used at selected airports around the country. The machine can detect objects made of metal.

Another informed source noted that potential hijackers might have been discouraged by reports filtering out of Cuba that their kind are given less than a hero's welcome.

Reports from Cuba indicate many hijackers are sent to the sugar-cane fields and others have been detained under house arrest. Several have returned to the U.S. to face trial.

There is also a suspicion that the FBI is putting men aboard selected flights in an effort to catch would-be hijackers.

Noise Pollution Expected to Triple Within Six Years

By GLADWIN HILL

CHICAGO (NYT) — It's going to get a lot noisier before it gets quieter.

That is the gist of the latest scientific assessment of the problem of obtrusive sound—a two-day symposium on "noise pollution" conducted by the American Medical Association here last week.

Environmental din is expertly estimated to be doubling in intensity every decade. Big jumps are in prospect from the mounting volume of air traffic—expected to triple by 1975—and the advent of supersonic transport planes with their window-shattering sonic booms.

"We recognize that noise is as much of an environment pollutant as the noxious gases, chemicals and wastes that befoul our air, water, crops and soil," said Dr. Gerald B. Dorman, president-elect of the association.

Airport noise alone has provoked billions of dollars in pending law suits and massive disruptions of property values.

Yet nobody professes to be in a position to deal effectively with the over-all problem.

"It might be a good thing if people's ears would bleed," one environmental psychologist remarked. "Then people might get aroused.

"It may take a disaster like a Santa Barbara oil slick to dramatize the situation. Unless that happens, noise pollution could be the last straw, on top of air pollution and all the other pollutions, that might bring our society crashing down."

Reports were cited that in North American homes, the background noise level has risen in the last 40 years from 20 decibels to 45 decibels.

Decibels are sound units. One decibel is the lowest audible sound, and each additional unit on a standard scale represents a tenfold increase in volume. About 80 decibels is the maximum comfortable level of sound.

A jet plane at close range may emit 150 decibels. The everyday urban noise to which people are exposed varies from moment to moment.

Heavy traffic weighs in at just about the tolerable limit of 80 decibels. But this may be punctuated by shouts (90 decibels), a motorcycle (110 decibels), a siren (125 decibels) or a riveting gun (130 decibels).

Crown Agency Could Save Money

OTTAWA (CP) — Creation of a federal government agency or Crown corporation to handle all government advertising could save $1,000,000 to $2,500,000 a year, says Barry Mather (NDP —Surrey).

Tuesday he put a motion on the Commons order paper calling for an agency to handle and co-ordinate an advertising program exceeding $25,000,000 a year.

Mr. Mather, a former newspaper columnist, said in an interview that advertising agencies can be assumed to take about 15 per cent of the gross billings to government departments and agencies.

He estimates that the cost of the government operating its own advertising agency might be five per cent of the gross, a 10-per-cent saving on the total bill.

Mr. Mather suggested two other benefits:

—A central advertising agency owned and operated by the government for all government departments and agencies could co-ordinate and consolidate the effort expanded by several privately-owned agencies and the departments involved.

—It would overcome the widely-assumed view that in hiring advertising agencies, government departments and their ministers grant contracts to their political friends in return for election-time favors. There is usually a sweeping turn-over of agency contracts whenever there is a change of government.

More savings might be gained, Mr. Mather said, if the proposed Crown agency took advantage of discounts offered by advertising media for prompt payment of bills.

Beer Price Hike Asked

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — The Alberta Hotel Association has asked the Alberta Liquor Control Board for permission to increase the price of a glass of draft beer to 20 cents from 15 cents. W. A. Proctor, association president, planned increased costs.

TRIBESMEN STAGE REVOLT

JAKARTA (Reuters) — West Irian tribesmen have revolted against the Indonesian government and have blockaded five airfields in the former Dutch territory, Dr. Sudjarwo, West Irian affairs chief, announced Tuesday.

Sudjarwo said 500 paratroops were dropped into the area to deal with the trouble which he said began two weeks ago.

Some West Irian police armed with rifles have joined the rebels, he said.

Three Given Prison Terms For Marijuana Trafficking

TORONTO (CP) — Three men involved in importing marijuana in bongo drums from Kenya for the purpose of trafficking were given prison sentences Tuesday.

James Douglas Shier, 20, of Bracebridge, Ont., shouted "Long live the revolution" when he was sentenced to two years less a day definite and two years indefinite. He had pleaded guilty to possessing marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Richard Kitchener Everett, 22, of Bracebridge, was sentenced to 18 months definite and one year indeterminate. He pleaded guilty to the same charge.

Kerry Charles Bindon, 24, an immigrant from Australia, was sentenced to one year definite and one year indefinite on the same charge.

The three were arrested along with two Toronto newspaper men at a Toronto warehouse last Nov. 20 where police seized $240,000 worth of marijuana.

Donald McRitchie Johnston, 28, of Toronto and Sydney Durward (Terry) Tremayne, 34, each were sentenced April 28 to 14 years in prison. Both were editorial employees of The Globe and Mail.

Johnston had pleaded guilty to conspiring to import marijuana and Tremayne to possession for the purpose of trafficking.

The 14-year sentences are believed to be the stiffest ever imposed in Canada for marijuana convictions.

Trio Lives One Year In Room

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Soviet scientist said Tuesday three Russians have survived a full year in a room-size simulated spacecraft on dried food and water reconstituted from breath and urine.

They tried to regenerate their used oxygen, he said, but had to add 30 per cent during the experiment, which ran a year from November 1967.

Boris Adamovich, physiologist for the ministry of health in the Soviet Union, told of the experiment at the annual meeting of the Aerospace Medical Association.

Through an interpreter, he said:

"Our conclusion is that men can live for up to a year in a spacecraft environment. The subjects worked and thought efficiently throughout."

The longest closed-cabin test reported in the United States has been about two months.

Adamovich said the three grew cabbage and other greens in a small greenhouse attached to the simulated spacecraft, but this supplied only one per cent of their total food.

Improvement Seen in China-U.S. Relations

By HARRISON E. SALISBURY
(New York Times News Service)

HONG KONG. — In the opinion of recent Asian visitors to Peking, Communist China's relations with the Soviet Union may grow worse but will not improve in the foreseeable future, whereas relations with the United States may take a turn for the better.

This assessment was made by non-Communist Asian officials who were present in Peking during the first weeks of the Chinese Communist Party's Ninth Congress, which lasted most of April. The visitors met a number of important Chinese officials, including Premier Chou En-lai.

It is their belief that the Soviet Union has replaced the United States in the minds of Chinese Communist officials as the chief threat and as China's No. 1 enemy.

Support for this assessment is found in a careful analysis of the statement to the party Congress by Defense Minister Lin Piao, Chairman Mao Tse-tung's chosen heir.

JOINTLY DENOUNCED

Lin devoted just under 4,000 words of his 24,000-word speech to foreign affairs. Of this total, 45 per cent of his wordage was devoted to denunciation of the Soviet Union and 7.5 per cent to attacks on the U.S. About 33 per cent was employed in passages in which the U.S. and the Soviet Union were jointly denounced. The remainder dealt with the world in general terms.

There was an equally sharp contrast in the invective and characterizations that Lin, the party's deputy chairman, applied to the Soviet Union and the U.S.

He inveighed at length about Soviet actions in Czechoslovakia, accusing the Russians of suppression, sabotage, subversion, invasion and kidnaping. He was equally emphatic in denouncing the Russians for the Chinese-Soviet border clashes last month on the frozen Ussuri River calling the Soviet leadership "the new czar."

UNRESOLVABLE

But Lin made no special mention of American action in Vietnam in a general catalogue of U.S. crimes and made only one generalized reference to American involvement in Vietnam.

The marked dichotomy of the address closely fitted the impressions of the Asian visitors in Peking. They emerged with the conviction that the Chinese leaders now regard the conflict with Moscow as virtually unresolvable and the possibility that it may turn into military conflict as by no means unthinkable.

The Chinese conflict with the U.S. was seen by visitors as of an entirely different order and one that might, with considerable effort, yield to a more positive relationship.

It was their opinion that, with the conclusion of the party Congress, China might well begin a careful overhaul of its world diplomatic stance.

What steps might be taken in the field of American relations was difficult to predict, but the visitors suggested that in coming months there might be a quiet move to resume the Warsaw meetings of U.S. and Chinese diplomats, which have seen suspended for more than a year. They did not believe that China's cancellation of the meeting scheduled for Feb. 20 was designed to indicate permanent lack of interest in such contacts.

Compensation Asked

NELSON (CP)—Trapper Carl Schwartzenhauer says he wants $20,700 compensation from B.C. Hydro for his expropriated trap line, soon to be submerged by a rising Lower Arrow Lake. Hydro has offered $3,000.

FISH TRADE RECIPROCITY PROPOSED

TORONTO (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis Tuesday called for the abolition of tariffs on fish products between Canada and the United States.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Fisheries Council of Canada, Mr. Davis said: "We must obtain reciprocity with the United States, not only in fishing each other's waters, but also on the trade front as well.

"We must be able to buy our supplies and equipment at the lowest possible price and we must be able to sell our products with a minimum of red tape."

New Rates Provide Major Headache for Postal Officials

By CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal officials are required to tread through a thicket of ifs and buts in deciding how much postage to charge some periodical journals under new post office rules.

The decisions have raised questions and prompted appeals —a handful successful—since the complex regulations were published Nov. 27 following enactment of a revised Post Office Act Oct. 31.

New rates governing postage for publications came into force April 1 and some will be increased further at two six-month intervals under the new law.

At issue is whether a periodical journal qualifies to retain second-class postal status under the new rules or is judged to be third-class mail subject to higher charges.

At stake in the decision on classification could be a few cents a copy, a sum that mounts quickly when hundreds or thousands of copies are mailed to readers weekly, monthly or quarterly.

While the rules governing classification are a maze of conditional clauses with an overgrowth of exceptions, a careful reader might pick his way through to a conclusion for most publications.

CONFUSION ARISES

Difficulty could arise in determining whether a journal of political comment, say, must pay the higher postage rate because it is "published by or under the auspices of a . . . political association" or rates cheaper, second-class status because it is devoted primarily to "social criticism."

Applications from some such journals were still being studied by officials in the post office department early this week.

Since the regulations were issued in November, publishers of about 3,300 periodicals have applied to retain second-class mail status.

About 2,200 of the total were successful, a spokesman said Monday.

More than 5,000 publications had second-class status before the new rules came in.

Of the 1,100 journals turned down and required to pay higher, third-class rates, about 100 have filed appeals to the postal rates and classification branch in Ottawa.

The spokesman said about half the appeals had been processed and about 10 per cent—perhaps five publications—had won their appeals.

Among about 50 appeals awaiting decision were two for publications that figured in a barbed Opposition question to the government in the Commons late last month.

WHY THE LEGIONARY?

Jack McIntosh, Conservative MP for Swift Current—Maple Creek, asked Postmaster-General Eric Kierans April 29 why his department "has lifted the second-class mailing privileges of the Canadian Legion magazine."

"Because it represents the interests of a very important, but still a particular group," replied Mr. Kierans.

"Can the minister explain why his department, while lifting second-class privileges from legitimate labor union publications, has granted such privileges to a whole string of Communist and subversive publications, such as Canadian Tribune, Communist Viewpoint, Combat, American Exile in Canada?" asked Mr. McIntosh.

The question went unanswered because Speaker Lucien Lamoureux intervened.

Information provided by the post office Monday showed the Canadian Tribune was granted second-class status, and American Exile was turned down and must pay the higher rates.

Decisions were pending on Communist Viewpoint and Combat.

A spokesman says the editorial viewpoint of a publication would have nothing to do with its postal classification.

The amended act requires publishers to apply each year for second-class postal status, filling in answers to about 30 questions on an application form and paying $15.

The fee normally is not refundable, whether the application is approved or not. However, for initial applications since Nov. 27, fees are being returned to unsuccessful applicants.

MUST MEET TERMS

Basically, journals qualify for second-class rates when they deal primarily with current news, are published in Canada at least four times a year at a minimum subscription price of 50 cents a year by a publisher who makes the journal his principal business and confines advertising copy to a prescribed maximum.

Specifically excluded are journals published for the benefit of "a particular profession."

Also excluded are those published for or by an association—professional, trade, fraternal, local church, labor, credit or co-operative. The Legionary and American Exile were excluded under that clause.

However, such a group journal may rate second-class status when it is devoted primarily to "religion, the sciences, agriculture, forestry, fisheries, social or literary criticism or reviews of literature or the arts or that is an academic or scholarly journal. . . ."

Also likely to win second-class mailing privileges is a journal devoted primarily to the promotion of public health—provided it is published by a non-profit organization, but only if it is an "organization organized on a national or provincial basis."

On the other hand, it wouldn't

Frankenstein Ballet An International Plot

TORONTO (CP) — Behind the dusty facade of St. Lawrence Hall in a run-down section of Toronto, Roland Petit plots a ballet.

Its title is Graanberg and on June 2 the National Ballet of Canada will give it a world premiere at the official opening of Ottawa's $46,000,000 National Arts Centre. Mr. Petit, a French choreographer who already has won renown in his homeland, is in charge of creating the full-length work.

Kraanberg now is being planned behind locked doors and the 45-year-old choreographer says it will include a score by Iannis Xenakis, a Greek composer of electronic music, and sets by Romanian artist Vassarely. As for the plot, Mr. Petit said Wednesday he started off by wanting to do "a Frankenstein work."

He said he and the composer "wanted to show how men will be changed by having new hearts and brains to replace the old ones if they wear out."

"We wanted to show how men will try to achieve perfection in the future."

To achieve perfection now, Mr. Petit already is holding rigorous rehearsals with the National Ballet in St. Lawrence Hall, a public meeting hall built in 1850 and renovated as a Centennial project.

Ottawa will make its mark in the ballet world this year, for Mr. Petit considers the premiere as "probably the most important opening in the ballet world this year."

The musical score has been written for an orchestra, but half of it will be played on tapes and will make use of echo chambers and distortions. The score "is not really electronic" but "it is not traditional either since it has no real melody line."

The set will include thin black and white vertical lines across the back of the stage and a smaller series of similar lines moving slowly back and forth across the back lines. Mirrors will form the side of the stage and coming down toward centre stage will be two large shapes, one a globe and the other a diamond.

Mr. Petit is considered one of the great contemporary ballet figures.

At 21 he created and danced in Les Forains, a major ballet of its time. Four years later he choreographed Carmen for his own company, Les Ballets de Paris, and danced with his wife Renee Jeanmaire.

Last summer, he created Turangalila, which won praise from Paris critics.

He considers Mr. Xenakis, who has never composed specifically for ballet before, one of the five greatest living composers. Vassarely has never done stage designs before, but Mr. Petit is optimistic about his ballet.

"It took courage for the National Ballet of Canada to hire me. I hope my work will justify their faith in me—obviously, I think it will."

One thing about the title: Mr. Petit explains it comes from two Greek words. Kraan means "to realize oneself" and erg means energy.

OUT of New York hospital after five days for treatment for hemorrhaging of the left eye is comedian Bob Hope. The problem has been with him for the past 10 years.

Princely Ribbing by Opera Stars

VIENNA (AP) — The cast of the Vienna State Opera gave Prince Philip a gentle ribbing in German while Queen Elizabeth sat beside him occasionally whispering for a translation.

The royal couple, on an official visit to Austria, attended a performance of Johann Strauss's Die Fledermaus Tuesday night.

Philip, who speaks fluent German, laughed when British tenor Murray Dickie, who sang the role of Prince Orlofsky, explained why he did not comprehend something.

"I am a prince and I do not understand so fast," Dickie said.

The Queen, who speaks no German, turned to the prince for an explanation.

Later, baritone Eberhard Waechter, who played the role of Eisentein, told Dickie: "You are a prince? I had a different idea of what a prince looks like."

Dickie is short and overweight.

Dickie replied: "We cannot all be tall and handsome."

Recognizing the obvious reference to Philip, the audience applauded.

'Mrs. Robinson' Best Record

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Pop singers Simon and Garfunkel Monday night received the annual Grammy Award for best record of 1968 for their song, Mrs. Robinson.

Written by Paul Simon and sung by him and Art Garfunkel, Mrs. Robinson became widely known as part of Simon's score for the film, The Graduate.

The song was chosen by the National Academy of Recording Arts from among five nominees for the best record.

The others were Jeanne C. Riley, Harper Valley PTA; Glen Campbell, Wichita Lineman; the Beatles, Hey, Jude, and Bobby Goldsboro, Honey.

Renaissance Paintings Transported to Thames

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — The long journey to Tuscany which art lovers must normally make to savor the masterpieces of Florentine fresco-painting has temptarily shrunk for Londoners to the length of Waterloo Bridge.

By a miracle of modern ingenuity, Renaissance murals which formerly could never have been moved from the church walls and ceilings on which they were painted six centuries ago, have been transported to an art gallery on the south bank of the Thames.

Patient Italian craftsmen devised a method by which the delicate, plaster-based works, some within inches of destruction in the Florence flood of 1966, could be peeled like an orange skin from the original walls and attached to canvas or hardboard portable mounts.

The 70 priceless frescoes by such Renaissance masters as Giotto, Piero della Francesca, Uccello and Andrea del Sarto would have had to be removed anyway from their crumbling walls.

The technical skill involved in detaching the frescoes from their centuries-old bed is almost as impressive as the mastery of the original painters. One Renaissance artist called the fresco "the sweetest and subtlest technique that exists"—but it was also one of the most difficult ever devised by man.

First a layer of rough plaster was laid upon the surface to be painted. On this the artist would make his preliminary sketch with a pigment of red earth. Then he would lay smooth plaster over a small section of the drawing, which he had memorized, and quickly execute the painting before the wet plaster dried.

The colors then hardened into an integral part of the wall fabric. There was no margin for error. Furthermore, the artist often had to guess how the colors—some made of ground-up semi-precious stones—would turn out when they dried.

The main technique used to detach the frescoes involved slow and cautious work with a knife to separate the rough and smooth layers of plaster, meanwhile tapping the painted surface with a rubber hammer to reduce adhesion.

In some cases the craftsmen were able to remove the rough layer as well and place the drawing or "sinopia" alongside the finished painting for exhibition.

INFLUENCE RECALLED

In one notable instance, this has produced a fascinating artistic detective story and brought vividly to life the influence of the religious "establishment" in medieval Italy.

The fresco concerned depicts a favorite subject of the early 14th century, the Annunciation. In his preliminary drawing, Ambrogio Lorenzetti of Siena had portrayed a most dramatic and unconventional view of the Virgin Mary, cowering away from the advancing Angel Gabriel with a frightened face and clutching a pillar for support.

This was also how he painted the original fresco, but at some later date the whole figure of Mary was repainted in the conventional attitude of humble submission, standing with hands crossed piously on her breast.

Over the centuries, however, almost all the repainting on Mary's body—which unlike the new face and hands was done in dry fresco—has flaked away. The original crouching, terrified figure now is plainly visible beneath, raising fascinating speculation over the rumpus that may have ensued when church authorities saw Lorenzetti's disturbing interpretation.

The highlight of the exhibition is generally agreed to be another Annunciation by the 16th century Florentine Pontormo—a breathtaking, swirling masterpiece in the baroque style, its restored colors as fresh as if they had been painted yesterday.

When the London exhibition closes June 15, they will return to their Tuscan churches and chapels—but never again to their original walls.

Takeover Of Drugs A 'Disaster'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Harold D. Dalgleish, president of the Canadian Medical Association, said Tuesday nationalization of the drug industry would be a major disaster.

Speaking to the annual meeting of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers' Association of Canada, Dr. Dalgleish suggested current moves by Ottawa to lower prescription drug prices may signal Ottawa's intention to take control of all health care funds in Canada.

"Is it the government's philosophy that crown corporations are more efficient and lest costly than comparable productions by private enterprise?" he asked.

MAJOR DISASTER

". . . In my opinion, if the drug industry becomes a crown corporation or psuedo crown corporation of the federal government, it would be a major disaster."

He said he was concerned about proposed federal legislation to encourage use of imported drugs.

"We would do well to reflect on the objectives of the politicians with regard to all phases of health care," Dr. Dalgleish said. "I am wondering if the current approach to legislation might have a familiar ring to some of us in the medical profession.

"Could their ultimate aim be to take over the control of all funds for health care?"

Get a New Heart; Lose Your Mind

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Some people receiving new hearts have paid by losing their minds, a psychiatrist reported today.

They became psychotic or mentally ill after heart transplant surgery. Others have developed curious psychological reactions.

This new aspect to the borrowing of human hearts was described to a convention of the American Psychiatric Association by Dr. Donald T. Lunde, psychiatric consultant to the heart transplant team at Stanford University Medical Centre.

He said five of 13 persons receiving hearts at Stanford became psychotic soon after surgery. Three have died, including one who was mentally disturbed from the day of the operation.

Three other persons exhibited at least temporary emotional upsets, Dr. Lunde said. One suffered from depression, the others from disturbances in mood and thinking.

FEARED SEX CHANGE

In addition, a man who received a woman's heart wonderd whether he would lose his masculinity. But he comforted himself with the thought that women are less likely to develop coronary heart disease.

A man in his 40s who received the heart of a 20-year-old felt that he now was young, born again.

A man who learned he had been given the heart of a prominent citizen confided that he felt an obligation to live up to standards set by the donor.

Dr. Lunde said Stanford established a policy of keeping secret the identities of donors so that recipients would not learn them from press reports.

The people who became seriously psychotic suffered from paranoia and delusions, Dr. Lunde said.

THOUGHT THEY MOCKED

One man suspected that the drug used to suppress the body's rejection mechanism against borrowed organs was a poison.

He thought the nurses and doctors wore masks to hide contemptuous, mocking expressions.

One reason for psychological reactions in heart recipients is that they know the rejection mechanism may set in and become lethal, Dr. Lunde said.

For reasons still unknown, the heart-lung machine used in heart transplants may also be involved.

Temporary psychotic episodes have been noted in many patients who have been hooked up to such machines briefly during open-heart surgery.

Prednisone, one of the drugs used to counter the rejection mechanism, is also known to affect some people mentally.

Waiting anxiously for a long time for a donor to become available may also be a factor.

Instant Mountain A Spoiler

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — A Saskatchewan Chamber of Commerce tourist promotion, Homecoming 1971, lists recreational facilities and clean air among 29 reasons to visit that Prairie province.

Another: There are no mountains to spoil the view.

Les Donnelly of the Saskatchewan Tourist Association told the chamber's annual meeting the promotion is an all-out campaign for tourist dollars.

But a Saskatoon delegate objected to Mr. Donnelly's sense of humor. The city plans a man-made mountain for the 1971 Canadian Winter Games.

TEEN-AGERS TAKE TO ROAD IN BID TO SAVE BUILDING

About 270 teen-agers will take to the road Saturday in an effort to save a much-used waterfront building.

The Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadets, Admiral Rayner Navy League Cadets and Patricia Dufour Navy League Wrenettes are determined to save their home, the Navy League headquarters at the foot of Robert Street.

The aging building has become a familiar sight to boats entering the Inner Harbor. Over the years thousands of youngsters have had their first taste of the discipline which the sea demands through the training received there.

The local Navy League branch was first formed in the late 1890s and, through its efforts, federal authorities were persuaded to form a naval reserve division.

Concerned with the preservation of Canada's sea power, the league quickly realized that youth training was a vital part of such a program.

In 1914 it formed the Boys' Naval Brigade, fore-runner of today's Rainbow corps. The Victoria branch also pioneered the Navy League cadet and wrenette programs, being the first in Canada to provide training for boys of 12 to 14 and girls of 14 to 18 years of age.

HEAVY BURDEN

The provision of quarters has always been a heavy burden on the branch. Cadets paraded on Rithet Pier, a school basement and other makeshift bases until the branch bought the Robert Street property in the 1940s.

Originally the place where the James Bay Athletic Association stowed its racing shells, the main building was adapted to provide classrooms, quarterdeck and store rooms. Other facilities were built, including a rifle range, boathouse and jetties. Most of the labor was provided by branch members, cadets and their officers.

Now, with rising taxes and costs, and diminishing support from the public, the Navy League finds it increasingly more difficult to meet costs. It has been operating at a $1,000 deficit annually for the past few years.

LAST-DITCH OFFER

Threatened with the loss of their barracks, the cadets and wrenettes have decided to hold a 20-mile walkathon Saturday as a last-ditch effort.

The money raised through the sponsorship of the youngsters has been earmarked for the repair of the buildings, resurfacing of the outside parade ground (originally dug out of bush by cadets and officers) and a contribution toward the $5,000 it takes Navy League to operate the three corps annually.

No one is going to miss this extra parade. As one officer puts it, "I'd walk barefoot if I had to. Victoria can't afford to see Rainbow die."

EXTRA WEIGHT, in the form of a cast on his left foot, will be carried by Rainbow's band officer, Sub.-Lt. Lorne Hammette, RCSC, in Saturday's walkathon.

Minister Ready 'For Long Siege'

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Don Jamieson, the personable Newfoundlander who has been vaulted into the demanding role of transport minister from the relatively modest supply portfolio, is "digging in for a long siege," although he's apparently keeping his options open about Newfoundland politics.

Fielding questions from reporters about the possibility of some day succeeding Premier Joseph Smallwood in Newfoundland, Jamieson avoided a direct "no" with the same care with which he avoided a direct "yes."

"I don't rule out any possibilities in the field of politics," he told reporters Monday a few minutes after he heard Prime Minister Trudeau tell the Commons Jamieson had succeeded Paul Hellyer as transport minister.

"When I entered politics I said I would do the best job I could for Newfoundland. I'll continue to do this."

Would this involve becoming premier of the province some day?

"There is no vacancy." When there is a vacancy?

"I'll look at things then and decide what's the best thing for Newfoundland."

WILL BE BUSY

Meanwhile, the 48-year-old former broadcaster, who resigned last year as president of the Newfoundland Broadcasting Co., which operated six television and three radio outlets, is going to have his hands full in his new portfolio.

Apart from the current Air Canada strike, he appears likely to face a barrage of questions from Newfoundland Conservatives about the decision to discontinue passenger rail services in his native province. The six Conservative MPs from Newfoundland had been firing daily questions at Mr. Hellyer on the subject.

"At the moment this is in the hands of the Canadian transport commission," said the new minister. "But it could be a question I'll have to deal with."

Jamieson also made it clear he disagrees with Mr. Hellyer's argument that constitutional details were allowed to put unnecessary roadblocks in the way of such legislation as housing.

"I have enough experience in the Atlantic provinces to know how far you can get by running roughshod over the provinces.

"The unilateral approach is not the answer for the future."

North Saanich Approves Sewage Study

A joint North Saanich School District 63 sewage study was approved Monday.

It will determine future sewage treatment requirements for Deep Cove Elementary School on West Saanich Road and the homes in the immediate vicinity.

Council has agreed to share with the school board half the costs of the $1,000 study to be carried out by Ker, Priestman and Graeme Engineering Ltd.

The study was advocated by the board following a request from the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health that it replace the septic tank at the Deep Cove school with a holding sewage tank.

The waste will be trucked away at a cost of about $7,000 a year.

Septic tank effluent was seeping into the school grounds and ditches and Metro Health Board ordered the installation of a tank or the construction sewage treatment facilities.

ADEQUATE TREATMENT

School trustees decided it would be uneconomical to go it alone and install an adequate treatment system, but a scheme to serve the needs of the school and homes in the vicinity might be feasible.

Mayor J. B. Cumming said the study will determine the economic aspects of such a community-school sewage disposal system.

"In the long run it may be less costly to install a system to take in part of the Deep Cove community than to pay for the trucking of waste from the school every day," he said.

"As the school expands it will mean a larger holding tank and more money for trucking," he explained.

The study is timely as Deep Cove is facing a growing pollution problem.

Many septic tanks at individual homes are not functioning properly due to the shallow, light soil which doesn't absorb the liquid waste.

Effluent runs into ditches and in some cases on to adjoining properties.

Raw sewage is also discharged on beaches.

Safeguard Won't Work, Says Study

Washington (WP) — A book-length study prepared at the request of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D—Mass.) concludes that the Nixon administration's safeguard anti-ballistic missile system probably will not work and will appear to the Soviet Union as an escalation of the arms race.

The report by scientists, scholars and some prominent public figures declares that there is no reason to deploy an ABM now even if the technical problems could be resolved.

It also argues that in terms of actual dollars to be spent the Nixon administration's Safeguard is not very different from the system the Johnson administration had devised as a defence of American cities.

At the Pentagon, a statement intended as a rebuttal came from research director John S. Foster Jr., who said: "We find nothing in the report that has not been analyzed in depth by the department of defence and the technical community over the past 10 years."

EXAGGERATIONS

Foster said the report exaggerates difficulties of building an ABM and underestimates the problems an enemy would confront in overcoming it.

"In fact, because it contains a number of errors and is internally inconsistent," Foster said, "it could add to the confusion of the very people whom the authors want to help on this issue."

A kind of adversary brief from congressional anit-ABM forces, the Kennedy-sponsored "evaluation" is likely to inject more charges of playing politics. The White House, hoping to dislodge some Republican senators from the opposition, has picutred the ABM debate as a Kennedy-versus-Nixon clash.

Kennedy originally was included to write a preface for the report and allow it to be published by Harper and Row and the New American Library for commercial sales.

Because of the political ramifications — it would then become a highly visible "Kennedy project" — he has not yet assured publishers that he will provide a preface.

UNDERWORLD MAN KILLED

BURNABY (CP) — Homicide detectives continued their investigation today into the stabbing death Tuesday of Wallace Jack Tadick, 33, whose body was found by two cleaning women in a motel room.

Police said Tadick was active in the underworld drug trade.

He had been stabbed 20 times in the chest and throat. A broken door indicated the killer forced his way into the room.

Officers said no weapon was found and there was no sign of a struggle.

What in the World Do Little Boys Wear?

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

There they were, ready to leave for school: the big one with a six-inch gap between his corduroys and his socks; the little one with a four-inch gap around the middle.

Huckleberry Finn and his little brother.

"Why don't you wear the new pants I bought you?" I asked.

"These are the new ones," Huckleberry replied.

I remembered. The old ones turned into cut-offs without being cut.

I knew little brother was wearing his new cords. I recognized them from the paint stain he got on them the first time he wore them.

A round-up of clothes from under beds, from the cobwebbed depths of cupboards, and from overflowing ironing baskets provided a nice haul for the Salvation Army. It included 67 unmatched socks.

One miserable pile of remainders included one good white shirt, worn only at school festivals; one pair of grey flannels, worn only under protest; one British-style raincoat, worn hardly at all and always with fear of meeting any of his friends; and one pair of short, tight, torn jeans, worn on all possible occasions.

The other stack was a pathetic collection of hand-me-downs—hardly a wardrobe for the best-dressed list.

At work the next day I read an article that said the average Canadian child goes through as many clothes in a year as the average Canadian mother does in three. I find this a believable statistic.

Toreador Vest and a Red Sash

Less believable were the descriptions of some of the clothes children are supposed to be wearing. Here's one, seen at a fashion show in Montreal.

"A one-piece stretch nylon suit had white sleeves and turtle-neck, cutaway toreador red vest and navy pants, zippered up the front. A red sash at the waist was the only separate item. This style is unisex—boys and girls alike could enjoy wearing it."

They could?

And for boys from four to 14, there's an astronaut-inspired jumpsuit "interpreted in the wet look and brown denim. Precision tailored in knits of stretch nylon with long zips, stand-up collars, body seaming and inset hip belts."

For the six-year-olds there is a "Trudeau-styled trench coat of sleek, leather-like vinyl, belted, double-breasted and topped with a wide collar of fake fur."

I doubt if it would go over any better than the good British raincoat.

When I went shopping for my neglected children I didn't find jump suits.

I got more jeans for Rob, as requested, and a flower-power tee shirt which I thought no 11-year-old boy in his right mind would wear, and a magenta-colored shirt with a scarf-like tie which is a howling success.

For Jamie, pants and a tee-shirt (two sizes too large) to be worn over the pants since that's where Jamie's shirts always end up anyway.

But the greatest success of all was his white tee-shirt with the picture of the tin of soup on it.

So much for a parent's preconceived ideas of what kids will wear.

These are the one-piece jumpsuits suggested by eastern manufacturers for boys from 4 to 14. They would at least avoid the gap in the middle and the shirt tail hanging out.

Most Parents Still Believe In Authoritarian Schools

By DOROTHY RICH

WASHINGTON — The title could dissuade even the most fervid education addict, but there is some fascinating information in a new and lengthy U.S. office of education study entitled "Actual and Perceived Consensus on Educational Goals Between School and Community."

Columbia University researchers went into the wilds of New Jersey to interview almost 3,000 people—parents, students, teachers and principals, rich and poor, from suburb and city. As research studies go, this is a fairly large sample. But how applicable these findings are to other homes and schools can only be conjectured. Nevertheless, David Wilder and his team give some old cliches about education a new appraisal and come up with some interesting insights.

Most mothers of all social classes chose as their first choice schools which stress traditional intellectual attainments. This is probably tied to parents' recognition that though vocational studies may be practical, intellectual ability is the road to upward mobility.

While many mothers voted for the authoritarian style, most teachers and principals described themselves as discovery-oriented.

Students, too, also went for more independent learning.

Educated woman are more critical of the school and less likely to think school is doing a good job. Middle-class mothers are more satisfied when they get to learn about what goes on at school. This does not affect the less educated woman as much.

Marks are all powerful. All students, even those getting poor marks and disinterested in school, acknowledge the importance of good marks.

On cheating: 52 per cent of the 10th graders interviewed admitted that they cheated at least once during the year. Richer kids cheated less than poorer kids; youngsters more social cheated more than the academic types; smarter kids already getting good marks cheated less than youngsters getting middling marks. More boys than girls cheated regardless of their marks. Unhappy youngsters cheated more than happy ones.

The students, themselves, liked school even less than most parents and teachers thought. English teachers were the best liked of all faculty members, even when the student got low marks in English.

In spite of all the blame schools have been receiving lately for not doing a good job, this study indicates that parents criticize their child first rather than the school. Most parents interviewed blamed the child rather than his teacher for his poor performance.

Shapes and Shades for Sunglasses

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Whether in the city or headed for South American skiing or going to the beach, sunglasses are now part of one's fashion accessories. Of course, they're a necessity, too, but they're chosen now to look right with each costume.

Shape makes news in all the sunglasses collections. At Tropi-Cal huge round glasses come thinly rimmed in gold or silver, boldly framed in varihued tortoise. These giant-sized circles are ideal for city pants suits or separates.

New "aviator" silhouettes at Tropi-Cal lengthen and widen at the outer edges. They have the dash for pants costumes, head scarves and shoulder-swing handbags. Hexagonal shapes, cubes, ovals and tiny round globes take a variety of frames in a choice of colors, or go completely rimless.

Besides a variety of frames for a sunglasses wardrobe, there is a big choice of lens colors. For use where strong sun isn't a problem, there are lenses fashion-tinted in delicious shades of apricot, lavender, rosy pink, green, blue and soft grey. Particularly effective are giant-squared-off oval glasses mounted in a delicate crystal-line frame tinted to accent the lens color. Even polarized lenses in the Tropi-Cal collection now come in colors as well as the usual sunglass hues.

Foster-Grant is emphasizing dramatically wide frames in delicate colors such as stripes of pink and grey on large squares surrounding oval lenses. Box frames in pale blue wing away from lenses which wrap around the sides to protect from wind as well as sun. Big round lenses are rimmed in circles of white that match the sidepieces.

Mysterious Box No Mystery at All

By PENNY SAVER

A mysterious bundle landed on Mathilda's doorstep the other day. But she just glanced at the return address, laughed a short humorless laugh and went back to her cup of coffee. "Aren't you even going to pull it inside?" I asked trying to disguise my curiosity. "After all, it may . . . that is . . . a dog might come along and, ah, chew it." "Hardly," she replied. And with the door wide open we could see the dog anyway." Cruel woman—she made me finish my coffee before she would let me in on the secret: The mysterious box was full of books. "I have a friend who borrows books without returning them until she has so many books she has to hire a truck to cart them back. She's decided that mail trucks are the cheapest in the long run so she mails them back. The mysterious box was no mystery at all to me."

Helping Mathilda unpack and shelve the books gave me an interesting chance to test the old theory that a man (or woman) can be judged by the books he (or she) reads. But what kind of woman reads everything from Candy to Kant's Critique of Pure Reason? I gave up and began admiring the beautiful bookplates instead.

"No wonder she returned them to you," I commented. "With so awe-inspiring a reminder of whose books they are staring at her from every fly-leaf. Can one still buy these things or are they strictly passe?" "Far from it," replied my aunt. "I saw some bookplates just the other day. Some much like these and others that are made locally." The latter I learned are $1.75 a packet. They are colorful and include an Indian-style design, a wild rose pattern, one designed for girls and one for boys with a raven and a humorous verse. The one like those Mathilda has in her books range from $1.25 to $1.75 in price and vary in size. Pictures on the include sailing ships, black cats and leprechauns. Most are black and white but some are colored.

Happy Birthday, Pussums

Remember Pussums—My favorite cat? Yesterday I went to her birthday party which brought up the problem of what to buy a cat who has everything. I compromised and bought something both Pussums and her "mother" will enjoy—a book called Cats—24 Hours a Day. This book, written by Winifred Carriere, gives a lot of advice to cat owners both on care and on enjoying the pet. It is also fun to read for Miss (or is it Mrs.?) Carriere takes a personal approach, using cats she has owned to illustrate her points. I know Pussums will enjoy it—she loves reading (over someone's shoulder, of course) and her favorite topic is members of her own species. Moreover there is a section in the middle with pictures of cats showing the mechanics of the swinging cat door, and a method of introducing a cat to a new scratch post. This hard-cover book costs $6.50.

When Gladys saw my column yesterday she sternly ordered me to make mention of the frieze decoration for a child's room that she found. "Bunnies and ducklings are all very nice, Penny," she said," but ABCDEFG is much more important." This paper frieze shows the letters of the alphabet humorously illustrated. About nine inches deep it costs $2.50. It comes in a little folder, ready to spread out and tack up.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for information on this column.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Our Mothers, the Unsung Heroes

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Mother's Day will soon be here and I wish you would say something in your column to remind "young marrieds" to remember their mothers-in-law, too. Even if it's only a card or a note. There were so many years when I should have remembered my mother-in-law, but I was too "busy."

This year I will send her a spray of flowers — to the cemetery — bitterly regretting that I failed to send her flowers while she was living. I should have appreciated her more, written her more about her grandchildren, whom she loved so much, and most of all I should have let her know how much I had grown to love her.—

I hope others will not make the same mistake I made because next year may be too late. Abby, please use my real initials. I want my father-in-law to know how I feel. Sincerely yours, I.G.M.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe I'm wrong, but I always thought that Mother's Day was a day to remember one's own mother. I am my husband's sweetheart, companion, partner and lover but, by Jove, I am not his mother! I hope that Bill and I never start calling each other "Mother" and "Dad" like some couples we know. And we certainly don't intend to exchange gifts on "Mother's Day" and "Father's Day."—My Mother's Daughter.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

PEEK into cars of the future was given today at Detroit as General Motors took the wraps off some of its experimental machines. However, it was pointed out they are years away from becoming a reality on the highways. Glue-Sniffing Can Kill

Why do young people sniff nail polish remover, gasoline, glue?

Sometimes because of a family life breakdown, sometimes for kicks or curiosity or as a crutch to escape problems, Const. Gary Galbraith of the city police juvenile liaison squad said today.

"But it's happening every day and I only wish we knew the answer," added detective Inspector William Andrews. "Maybe it's our affluent society."

About 18 young people died in Canada last year from sniffing fumes given off by a variety of products, said Const. Galbraith. Post mortems in such deaths show deterioration of livers, respiratory systems and kidneys.

ALL ARE LEGAL

All the products involved have a legal use, said the officer. It's the misuse of them which is causing the problem.

He said he knew of a four-year-old boy and his five-year-old sister in Victoria who had required psychiatric care as a result of sniffing gasoline.

A 13-year-old boy who sniffed glue had become a "vegetable" without hope of recovery.

He said there have been 14 local cases he knows of that have required some sort of psychiatric treatment from sniffing.

Shop-lifting by young people and to a lesser extent break-ins to get the products for sniffing are side problems.

JEOPARDIZED FUTURES

Galbraith said young people who are "sniffing" don't realize they are jeopardizing their futures and need help. Anyone knowing of such cases should not turn their back but notify the school or police.

As far as he knowns no juvenile (person under age 18) has been jailed lately for being in possession of drugs although they have for trafficking in them.

Galbraith spoke to a meeting of Quadra elementary school Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday night in one of a series of information addresses police have undertaken.

Mother's Breakdown Blamed For Welfare Family Plight

An emotional breakdown was blamed today for a Victoria mother's refusal to seek help during a four-month period when her family of six children were without water.

The woman was admitted to hospital Monday and her children placed in care.

The pipes in her home had frozen just after Christmas, then burst.

Since that time the family was without adequate toilet facilities. They fetched water for drinking and cooking from a neighbor's outside tap—often surreptitiously.

Ironically, over the four-month period when the family was without water, minimum charge water bills came each month from the city. Though they remained unpaid no action was taken and the main supply was not shut off.

A Victoria welfare official said the woman and her children, aged six to 16, had been welfare cases on and off for years.

"They have functioned well for a number of years. For various periods the mother was employed at a city hospital and has done a creditable job." The children were described as "nice kids."

WITHDREW

In recent times, however, the strain of living in distressed circumstances apparently caused emotional strain and physical exhaustion which led to her withdrawal.

"She failed to keep appointments and when a social worker would call at her home it had the appearance of being vacant."

The official said that Monday "we finally managed to get hold of her." He discounted a report that one of the children had called for help.

He said the mother was taken to hospital, three of the children were taken to a hotel and the others were placed with friends and neighbors.

RETURN SOON

A plumber and a clean-up crew has been sent to the home and the children will be returned there "in the next day or so" in the care of a housekeeper.

Family and Children's Service social worker supervisor Betty Bryant, who helped arrange care for the children, said the situation was a glowing example of failure by Victoria's community services.

"My concern is that the city welfare office does not have sufficient staff to cope with the problem.

"I don't know if the city fathers know how serious the case loads are."

She said 10 workers and two supervisors share responsibility for helping 1,750 families on welfare.

She said in the case of this family, social workers should have been in close contact 18 months ago.

NO BEDS

She said also that the night Family and Children Service was asked for emergency accommodation there was not a bed available in any reciving home.

The main lack, she said, is resources for older children who come into care.

"This agency has never been in a worse position for looking after families."

MEMBERSHIP HIGH

The Confederation of National Trade Unions has a membership of about 200,000.

Hovercraft Runs Resume Today After Repairs

The Vancouver-Nanaimo hovercraft service resumed today after curtailment last Friday for hovercraft repairs.

Additional service between Sidney and Vancouver, which was licensed by the Department of Transport after the Air Canada strike began, has been temporarily suspended.

Officials of Pacific Hovercraft Ltd. declined to give reasons for the suspension of service or a date of resumption, but they expect the service to start again soon.

PRIME MINISTER CHALLENGED ON HOUSING

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Premier John Robarts of Ontario said Tuesday he disagrees with Prime Minister Trudeau that there is no housing crisis in Canada.

"It is true that a great many housing units are available, but they are not available to those who need them most," he told the Ontario legislature.

Ontario, which "has done more to provide housing than all the rest of Canada put together," is satisfied with the administrative procedures it is following to provide low-income housing and is not considering creation of a department of housing, he said.

Pope Announces New Departments

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Pope Paul published today a decree setting up two new Vatican departments, one for liturgical questions and the other for the canonization of saints.

The decree also abolished the former Sacred Congregation of the Rites, founded nearly 400 years ago, which used to take care of both functions.

Problems of Youth Panel Discussion

A panel of young people will discuss the problems of youth at the annual meeting of Family and Children's Service next Wednesday.

The panel will be representative of junior and senior high school and university students. Others have been chosen because of race, economics or home environment.

F and CS says that in past years speakers have included judges, lawyers, social workers, doctors, clergymen, "but never one of the young people we have often attempted to understand."

The panel discussion will be preceded by a short report and election of directors. It will be held in Newcombe auditorium in the new provincial museum and is open to the public.

Persons interested may telephone or write questions in advance of the meeting or ask them during the discussion. Advance questions whould be submitted to Intake Section, Family and Children's Service, 1627 Fort St.

Air 'Knight' Latest Race Finisher

NEW YORK (AP) — A Briton dressed in leather tunic, metallic kilt, plumed helmet and sword and scabbard and a chimpanzee attired in a silver lame pants suit were among the latest finishers in the great transatlantic air race.

The London Daily Mail has offered $156,000 in prizes to mark the 50th anniversary of the first non-stop transatlantic flight. The categories range from single-engine planes to supersonic military jets.

Michael Wellings, the would-be gladiator, arrived at the Empire State building Tuesday after a commercial jetliner flight from London. About the same time, Tina, a five-year old chimpanzee, met the press after finishing her London-to-New York journey in her own travelling cage.

The terminals of the race are the 33rd floor of London's Post Office Tower and the 86th floor of the Empire State Building.

Vladimir Kazan, a Wellesley Hills, Mass., travel agent, completed his round-trip flight in New York in less than 2½ days. Kazan flew a Piper Comanche and rested only 15 minutes in London between trips.

Solo pilot Ben Garcia of East Brunswick, N.J., said he hopes to re-enter the race in the commercial-flight section after he crash-landed in a Pennsylvania chicken farm Tuesday. His plane was wrecked.

Earlier, Garcia, 32, was barred by Canadian authorities at Moncton, N.B., from attempting the transatlantic flight from there. They said his plane did not have the range or proper radio equipment for the flight. He flew back to the U.S. after this only to crash at Lykens, Pa.

He suffered only a sore back and an aching arm in the crash.

Greek Regime Wins Reprieve

LONDON (WP) — The military regime in Athens won a conditional reprieve Tuesday when the Council of Europe voted to delay until December a final decision on suspending Greece from membership for alleged violations of human rights.

After a three-hour debate, the council's committee of ministers voted 13 to 2 for postponing action while at the same time expressing concern for the lack of freedom in Greece.

Greece and Cyprus opposed the motion, and three other countries — France, Turkey and Switzerland — abstained.

SPEED UP REPORT

West German Foreign Minister Willy Brandt, speaking as chairman of the ministerial committee, told a news conference that the council also urged its human rights commission to speed up its report on Greece. Sources said that the report should be finished by this summer.

Brandt said that in expressing its concern the council had drawn the attention of the Greek government to the need for "a speedy return to democratic rule." He also reported that the Dutch and Italians had favored an immediate vote on suspension.

The equivocal verdict came as a disappointment to opponents of the two-year-old military junta in Greece, who have been pressing the ministers to accept the recommendation for censure adopted on January 30 by the council's consultative assembly.

Czech News Media Faces New Controls

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia's Communist bosses, still dissatisfied with the press, radio and television, demanded today a "fundamental change"—more of the party line in news reports.

Charging that government directives have been "often implemented inconsistently," the 11-member party presidium called on "responsible Communists to speedily remove the causes of the present deficiencies."

The announcement followed a meeting Tuesday of the top policy-making body headed by First Secretary Gustav Husak. It said:

"The main tasks of press, radio and television are considered to be to help actively the leadership of the party and state in their efforts to overcome the crisis in the political, economic and cultural sphere . . . and to consistently defend and advocate the policies of the Communist party, national front and socialist state."

Czechoslovakia's news media already are working under prepublication censorship. Several liberal editors have been ousted, including some on Rude Pravo and Nova Svoboda, the party dailies in Prague and Ostrava, the country's third-largest city. The news agency CTK said Nova Svoboda editors were replaced by an 11-member council of non-journalist party workers.

POPULATION BALANCE IN RUSSIA CHANGES

By FARNSWORTH FOWLE
(N.Y. Times News Service)

NEW YORK — The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, which many foreigners still call "Russia" for short, is confronting a fact of changing domestic life: Russians as an ethnic group will soon become, if they are not already, a minority within the Soviet borders.

The next Soviet census slated for January, 1970, may well show that ethnic groups other than Russians outnumber the dominant Russians.

The demographic shift arises from the fact that the birth rate of non-Russians, especially the peoples of Central Asia and the Caucusus, greatly exceeds the birth rate of ethnic Russians.

In the last census, in January, 1959, ethnic Russians accounted for 54.65 per cent of the total population. By next January, the percentage of Russians may well be under 50 per cent.

A hint that the country is being prepared for a changing population balance came last month from a highly authoritative source at a news conference in the foreign ministry in Moscow. A dispatch by the press agency Tass publicized the event in the press all over the country.

Justas Paleckis, a Lithuanian who is chairman of Soviet of Nationalities, one of the two houses of the Supreme Soviet (parliament), recalled that before the Bolshevik Revolution the old Tsarist empire was less than 50 per cent Russian in nationality.

For that reason, he told newsmen, Lenin proposed a multinational structure in which the major ethnic groups would be constituted as nominally autonomous republics and other political units. There are more than 100 ethnic groups in the Soviet state.

Paleckis said the Soviet solution of the nationality problem has been helpful to other countries in the "socialist camp."

The subject is perhaps of special interest in the Kazakh Republic, where the indigenous Kazakhs are actually in the minority and more than half of the population is made up of ethnic Russians, Ukrainians, Germans, Koreans, Uigurs and others.

The Kazakh who heads the Communist party in the republic, Dinmakhamed A. Kunayev, mentioned "multinational Soviet Kazakhstan" last week at a Central Committee meeting in Alma-Ata. Then, in a brief reference to foreign policy, he reported that the workers of the republic unanimously denounced the "great-power, anti-Soviet policy of Mao Tse-tung."

"Great-power" is another clue to the Soviet Union's current "multinational" posture. It is a shorthand reference to an overbearing relationship between a greater nationality and lesser ones in the same state.

As used by Kunayev, it suggests that Mao's regime has been disregarding the rights of the Uigurs, Kazakhs and other Turkic peoples who form most of the population of the province of Sinkiang just across the border.

Whatever it may portend, multinationalism appears to be the Moscow line this year.

MAJOR CENTRE

Seoul, the capital of South Korea, has a population of nearly 4,000,000.

"IT'S OUR BAG and we should be left alone for a few months to handle our own troubles," Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of University of Notre Dame, told a news conference today. He said legislation to control disruptions is not the answer.

Cook Takes $100,000 From Army

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A 65-year-old retired short-order cook who had just won a $100,000 battle with the United States Army told of his plans for the money: "I'm going to pay my debts first and take care of my grandchildren."

Joseph R. Flynn, who was discharged from the army a week before his pension was due in 1945, had been fighting for his lost pension for more than three years. He won the battle last week, following a hearing before the army board for corrections of military records in Washington.

In a hearing at the Pentagon two months ago, Flynn and his lawyers refuted the charges of alcoholism that had brought his discharge.

The case finally turned on Flynn's attempt at re-enlistment in November 1945. Although he had the right to return to duty as a private, he was turned down only one week before he would have been eligible for a 20-year pension.

"But since then, I've cooked in a lot of places around Dallas. I've owned seven of my own cafes. I retired last November, and I get $84 a month from social security."

Under the new ruling, Flynn's records will be corrected to show he had reentered the service on Nov. 5, 1945, as a private and had served until Nov. 30, 1945 — just long enough to qualify for his pension.

Ottawa Remark Annoys Brothers

TRAIL (CP) — Donald Brothers, B.C. education minister, said Tuesday he's "mighty annoyed" at a statement that costs of flood damage here are within the province's means.

Mr. Brothers, MLA for Rossland-Trail, referred specifically to a comment by Art Laing, federal public works minister. The city and province requested federal aid after a flash flood here April 23.

"I'd like to know," said Mr. Brothers, "What the federal government would do if a flood of this magnitude hit Hull, Que."

He noted Ottawa had provided funds in 1964 when a tidal wave, picked up by Alaska's Good Friday earthquake, hit the Port Alberni region of Vancouver Island.

Costs of the Trail flood are estimated at $3,000,000 — twice the figure of the Port Alberni disaster.

Meanwhile, engineers completed a second spillway to drain water from swollen Violin Lake into the Columbia River. The lake is Trail's source of domestic water.

Teachers' March Heads for Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — Spokesmen for various factions in Quebec's teacher-contract dispute presented their cases before a legislature committee Tuesday, but only served to demonstrate the wide gulf dividing them.

Meanwhile, hundreds of school teachers have begun a march on the provincial capital from Montreal, St. Johns, Sherbrooke, Riviere du Loup and Murray Bay. They are to continue the march in relays, day and night, until they reach Quebec City May 14.

At the committee hearings, Marcel Masse, minister without portfolio responsible for teacher negotiations, reiterated the government's objections to the teachers' demands for arbitration of the dispute.

Arbitration would mean in effect that a judge would "set the level of taxes," he said.

But Raymond Laliberte, president of the 60,000-member Quebec Teachers Corporation, which also organized the march on the capital, said Mr. Masse was "grossly overdoing it."

BARGAINING 22 MONTHS

The teachers have been without a contract since June, 1968, and negotiations have been in progress for 22 months.

While Mr. Masse stressed the economic aspects of the dispute, Mr. Laliberte said the real issue holding up a settlement was lack of teacher participation in setting curriculum, choosing texts and establishing new teaching methods.

The march on Quebec City is the latest action taken to exert pressure on the government for a settlement.

The marchers moved off in groups of less than 100 Tuesday, planning to walk 20 miles before returning home by bus and giving over the march to fresh relay groups.

School rooms will be empty as each teachers' group participates.

MISLED BY PROMISES

In Montreal Tuesday, Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions with which the teachers corporation is affiliated, said in a written statement the Quebec people were "led down the garden path" by promises of democratic participation in educational reform.

Associations, teachers, students and parents were blamed for the disruption of education, but nowhere had they been able to participate effectively in the government decisions which had provoked present confrontations.

He said the cabinet, which maintains absolute control over distribution of education funds, allows only 45 per cent of the budget for teacher salaries.

The teachers are negotiating for a contract that would extend until the end of the 1971 school term.

Government legislation ended a series of teachers strikes in January and February, 1967, freezing work contracts until last June. It also ended the practice of regional negotiations for regional contracts.

The government had insisted that the next contract cover all the province's teachers and school boards.

Two Years Behind U.S. Kierans Says

TORONTO (CP) — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans said Tuesday his department is nearly two years behind the United States postal system in making needed changes.

Unless more changes such as mechanized mail handling are implemented, "the alternative will be disaster," the minister said in an address to the Greenwood Liberal Association.

NOMINATED as the New Democratic Party's candidate for the Atlin riding in the next provincial election is Indian MLA Frank Calder. He held the seat from 1949-1956 and was re-elected in 1960.

Grandmother Won't Eat In Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — Muriel Axmier, 57, who has refused food since Thursday—two days before she was sent from Victoria to Oakalla prison in Burnaby—continued her fast Tuesday.

The medical health officer at Oakalla said Mrs. Azmier, a grandmother of nine, was in good health but continued to take only water.

Selwyn Rocksborough Smith, B.C. director of corrections, said earlier she will be force-fed if her health appears endangered.

Mrs. Axmier, of Victoria and Ottawa, and Betty Andrews, 22, of Victoria, chose to serve two-week sentences rather than pay $50 fines for obstructing. They were among a group protesting the presence in March of a U.S. warship at Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt.

SNUFF SAID, SAID STROM AS SPITOONS VANISH

EDMONTON (CP) — Spittoons in the Alberta legislature?

This was the suggestion of Charles Drain (SC — Pincher Creek-Crowsnest) Tuesday as the assembly considered a bill to impose a new tax on tobacco users.

Provincial Treasurer Anders Aalborg said he would leave it up to the assembly to decide whether to include snuff in the bill.

Health Minister J. Donovan Ross said a lower tax on snuff may convince some cigarette smokers to switch.

Highways Minister Gordon Taylor said the legislation should provide for a doubling of the tax on snuff users who missed a spittoon three times in a row during one evening.

Mr. Drain asked if the public works minister would guarantee the replacement of the bronze receptacles on the floor of the legislature.

Public Works Minister Fred Colborne said his department, it seemed, had just finished "picking up all the spittoons from here and delivering them to the provincial museum.

"That's where we thought all the snuff users were."

The legislature approved leaving snuff in the act which now needs only third and final reading.

"Snuff said," Premier Harry Strom told the house.

Leaves Hospital

LONDON (Reuters) — Former prime minister Harold Macmillan, 75, left hospital Tuesday following an operation to remove a gallstone. Macmillan entered the hospital April 14.

Killed by Train

PENTICTON (CP) — Walter G. Wallin, 60, was killed and his grandson, Allan Formo, 3, was injured Tuesday when they were struck by a CPR freight train near Okanagan Falls, 15 miles south of here.

A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merril advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peaches-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion-beautifying cold water, smooth on tropical oil of Olay. This oil is rather scarce and expensive, but your drug store should be able to get you a supply.

WILDFIRE GROWTH

Sing-Along Outshines Mind Drugs

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Last Saturday 30 or 40 young people presented a program of song at the IODE Festival that had us smiling, clapping and tapping our feet in time to the music.

Forbes

These boys and girls were a good looking lot. They had happy faces. They sang with energy and with the movements of hands, feet and heads that youth associates with today's music. At the same time it was easy to see it was no casual performance. The young people believed in what they were doing. Believed in the words they were singing. And through those words they were eager to offer the world something sincere and constructive.

Last night I learned more about the group from Larry Owens and Pat Grant who were in at its organization, Ron Usher who joined shortly after, Pat Cameron and Bernie Cote.

★ ★ ★

It started, Larry told me, when a few students at Victoria High School became interested in a Moral Rearmament "sing-along" youth movement "growing like wildfire" in the United States and in other parts of the world.

A Portland Sing-Along cast (these groups are named casts) was invited to visit Victoria. They appeared in Centennial Square and in the Victoria High School auditorium.

"That started it", Larry said. Enthusiasm grew.

"Not only because we wanted to sing in a group but also because we were interested in the aims of this "Up The People" youth movement the world over.

"It was a way of becoming involved in something positive and constructive," Ron Usher chimed in.

"So we decided to see what we could do," Pat Grant added.

★ ★ ★

Today the Sing Out Victoria cast numbers around 170 young people between the ages of 15 and 25, mainly from Mt. Douglas and Oak Bay high schools and University of Victoria. And it is still growing.

Each one has adopted the "Up The People" ideal and each is pledged to making an effective contribution to society through their own lives.

The songs are written and the music is composed by members of Sing-Out casts around the world. They are wonderfully rhythmic, syncopated, melodic and significant and yet they effectively echo the old folksongs of a former day.

★ ★ ★

Poetry is present in every one and the words blend perfectly with the music and in turn with the rhythm of gesture and choreography.

While Victoria was "amongst the first" in Canada there are now a number of Sing-Out (or "Up The People") casts in the various provinces. Hundreds too, in the United States and other parts of the world.

From these groups international casts are formed. Last year Ron Usher joined one that toured in the United States, appeared at Montreal's Man and His World and spent two months in Italy.

Thursday morning Ron and Bernie leave on a motor trip that will take them across Canada "visiting casts and exchanging ideas." They will sing in and around Montreal for two months and then tour with an international cast as far as Latin America.

★ ★ ★

The Victoria group has the backing of interested business men and a solid corps of parents all of whom see in this movement something to effectively interest and involve youth.

Through donations, public sing-outs and a parent-sponsored bazaar last fall, necessary sound equipment was purchased and a travel fund initiated. Another bazaar is planned for early June.

Even with these few facts, you must now realize that this is no ordinary musical group. These young people are true "ambassadors of good will", dedicated to unite youth around the world in an exciting venture.

In their language the slogan "Up The People" means putting people first... all peoples.

To some this may seem impossible. But at least it is constructive and those involved are willing to dedicate time and energy to try and make it work.

To me this makes far more sense than the sterile protest marches and sit-ins we read about. Or the groping for a "meaning for being" through mind-searing drugs.

Divided French Nation Faces a Formidable Challenge

By DONALD H. LOUCHHEIM
The Washington Post/Outlook

PARIS — "France Continues."

With these words, the new acting president of the fifth republic, Alain Pher, formally opened the post-de Gaulle chapter in French history.

Despite apocalyptic warnings that "the deluge" would inevitably follow the exit of Charles de Gaulle, his resignation last Monday was accepted with surprising calm by the country he had dominated so completely for the past 11 years.

But as France continued, it was immediately clear that fundamental changes, and possibly formidable challenges, now faced the country.

"How can you rally a nation with 265 varieties of cheese?" de Gaulle once complained. For his successor, the task will be doubly difficult.

De Gaulle leaves behind him the burdens of a foreign policy that was tailored more to his own personal measure than to the size, the resources or the real power of his country.

How much of this legacy is left intact and how much is discarded will depend on the outcome of the June presidential elections. But some of the outlines of France without de Gaulle are already clear.

Unique Prestige

In foreign policy, no successor can inherit the unique personal prestige that de Gaulle enjoyed on the world stage. Nor is it likely that any new president would wish to maintain many of the positions de Gaulle staked out, even if he were able to do so. After a decade of grandeur, France is in the mood for meat and potatoes.

Such personal pet projects as de Gaulle's campaign to "free Quebec" and support for the Biafra secession are expeced to disappear with hardly a trace.

On European problems, all of the general's potential successors are likely to take a more flexible position on he question of Briish entry into the Common Market.

On the Middle East, French policy is expected to be more sympathetic toward Israel, in response to the obvious sympathies of French public opinion.

On Vietnam, the French desire for a unilateral American withdrawal from the war may remain unchanged. But the demands will undoubtedly be more muted. And de Gaulle's dream of re-establishing major French influence in Indochina may have little appeal for his successor.

In its approach to the United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, French policy had begun to shift considerably in the final year of de Gaulle's reign. This shift will undoubtedly continue, with improved relations between Paris and Washington and increased co-operation between the French army and NATO forces.

Weapons Cutbacks

Other essential elements of de Gaulle's foreign policy will also change. The fledgling French nuclear force will be maintained but its development will undoubtedly be cut back even further. A more flexible French stand toward participation in disarmament talks and international agreements on the control of nuclear weapons is possible.

On monetary questions, the dogmatic French emphasis on the primacy of gold had been muted in the past year, due to the weakness of the franc. Whether France will now agree to participate in the American-backed plan to create a new international reserve asset remains to be seen.

If de Gaulle had left power a year ago, the transition to a new French foreign policy, without any dramatic breaks with the past, would have been more difficult. But the domestic upheaval in France last May and the Soviet crackdown on Czechoslovakia forced de Gaulle to limit some of his international enterprises and prepare a series of fallback positions.

At the end of his reign, de Gaulle had pushed aside his vision of a united Europe "from the Atlantic to the Urals" and had shifted France's focus to more modest proposals for increased co-operation of Western European nations. At the same time, he began mending his fences with the United States and NATO. By the time he left power, the pendulum of French foreign policy had begun a major swing back toward where de Gaulle originally found it when he became president.

Junk 'All Azimuth'

A dramatic illustration of this swing was provided on the day of de Gaulle's resignation. The official monthly publication of the defence ministry carried a major article, which amounted to a government policy statement, scrapping France's controversial "All Azimuth" nuclear strategy.

This strategy maintained that France's nuclear force should be given an independent capacity to strike in all directions anywhere on the globe—against an American enemy as well as a Russian one. The "All Azimuth" doctrine was originally enunciated in the same defence ministry publication two years ago. At the time, it was generally regarded as a political strategy rather than a military one, designed as a declaration of French independence from the Atlantic alliance.

The new article stresses the necessity for France's "close co-ordination" with the NATO allies and it clearly redirects French nuclear strategy away from the "All Azimuth" approach to one aimed only at "an enemy from the east."

It also officially confirmed that France has sounded out NATO on the possibility of supplying French forces with American tactical nuclear weapons.

Inconsistent Move

Only a few months ago, officials here were hotly denying reports that France was interested in NATO nuclear weapons by explaining that such a move would be inconsistent with previous French positions. Indeed, as it turned out, it was.

If de Gaulle's legacy in foreign policy, at least in terms of its final pattern, seems to permit both change and continuity, the chances of a similarly smooth transition in the management of France's domestic affairs are remote.

In the decade since he founded it, de Gaulle's fifth republic has served as his personal instrument for governing France.

De Gaulle personally tailored the constitution to fit his own specifications and throughout his reign he made himself the ultimate interpreter of the constitutional powers and prerogatives of his presidency. When he occasionally found the constitution patently unsuited to his own design for France, he modified it accordingly.

The system of government de Gaulle devised combined, at least in theory, the features of both the American and British systems. There was a strong, popular elected president as head of state. As head of government there was a prime minister, theoretically the architect of its policies, appointed by the president but responsible only to Parliament. Only the president could appoint the prime minister, only Parliament could remove him.

Under de Gaulle, the key question of a clash between the president and the prime minister never arose. And only in one instance was there a direct clash between the president and Parliament. On that occasion de Gaulle dissolved the national assembly and called new elections.

Under de Gaulle, the system worked. But its primary pillar was the master-servant relationship that existed between the president and the prime minister and the president and Parliament. The foundation for this relationship had nothing to do with the institutions and constitution de Gaulle created. It resulted from de Gaulle's own personal stature and prestige.

Preserve Stability

In the wake of de Gaulle's departure, it is apparent that the vast majority of Frenchmen would like to preserve the key element of the fifth republic—government stability guaranteed by a strong president. But it is difficult to see how the system can work without de Gaulle.

It is already clear that any new president will have to surrender to the prime minister, and to Parliament, many of the powers that de Gaulle reserved for himself. But where the line will be or can be drawn remains an open question.

If too much power is surrendered, many Frenchmen fear a return to the revolving-door governments of the fourth republic. Alternatively, if the president and the Parliament find themselves locked in continual combat, the resulting paralysis could be far worse than the worst days of the fourth republic. Inevitably a dictatorship would loom as the only solution.

The political climate that characterized the end of de Gaulle's long reign will hardly improve his successor's chances to resolve these key questions.

Eleven years of Gaullist rule have left Frenchmen as bitterly divided as they were before the general's return to power. The politics of the Gaullist era made no attempt to achieve a broad national consensus.

Defended Holy Grail

Opponents were always outcasts, supporters were always defenders of the Holy Grail.

For the immediate future, the Gaullist party that supported de Gaulle may remain dominant. With the general gone, the only cement that holds the party together is attachment to institutions and foreign policies that will inevitably be modified no matter who succeeds de Gaulle. Like the fifth republic itself, the Gaullist party may be unable to survive without him.

In other respects, de Gaulle leaves France's political landscape largely as he found it. The Communist party remains the strongest, best organized political force in the country. On the fringes lurk extremists whose goal is to tear down the regime and replace it with a monarchy, a dictatorship or nothing, depending on their ideology. In the middle ranges of the political spectrum the traditional left, the traditional centre and the traditional right are still largely polarized around the politicians of the fourth republic that de Gaulle so vilified and despised.

Meanwhile, the economic problems that bubbled up in the final years of de Gaulle's reign will continue to plague and bedevil his successor.

Shopkeepers and small merchants are demanding lower taxes and less government interference. Big business is demanding more government aid. Workers are demanding higher wages and a new deal. Provincial administrations are demanding new roads, telephones, new schools.

The French currency has remained weak in world market places and a recurring trade deficit has been steadily eroding French reserves. Devaluation of the franc can still be warded off. Given the pent-up demands that any new government will have to satisfy it is hard to see how the present value of the franc can be mainatined.

On June 1, Frenchmen will go to the polls to elect de Gaulle's successor. They seem to be under no illusion about the difficulties facing the man they choose.

Jobs Await Men In Construction

DUNCAN — Construction workers are in short supply with most employed on schools, new bank premises, a hotel complex and the new provincial government building here, Canada Manpower said today.

Manager R. C. Robinson said logging operations are working at full capacity but tree-planting will be completed by the middle of May. No curtailment of employment at the Crofton pulp mill is expected because of improvements in the pulp market, he said.

PLANTING DELAYED

Cool spring weather and wet fields has delayed crop planting by valley farmers.

Robinson said the service industry is experiencing the normal seasonal increase with a steady stream of high school and university students registering for work.

There was a total of 934 active clients registered at the Canada Manpower centre here during April, an increase of 21 over March.

Indian Sports, Queen Crowning Set for Weekend

DUNCAN — The annual Corpus Christi celebrations with Indian games, parade and the crowning of Miss Cowichan will be held Saturday and Sunday.

The first day's event include the parade through the downtown areas starting at 10 a.m. followed by an exhibition soccer match at 11:30 a.m. and sports at the Somenos Reserve at 1 p.m.

Indian dancing will start at the Somenos longhouse at 8 p.m. while modern dancing will start at 9 p.m. at the old Eagles Hall where Miss Cowichan will be crowned.

REAPPOINTED district magistrate at Nanaimo Tuesday by order - in - council was Eric Winch who resigned last fall to unsuccessfully contest the Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands federal seat in a byelection. Probation and court staff expressed pleasure at his return. Winch was well-known for the novel punishments he meted out to young offenders, frequently ordering them to perform task of benefit to the community rather than pay a fine or go to jail.

Talks Coming On Relocation Of Chinatown

DUNCAN — Mayor Jim Quaife said he expects a meeting will be held later this month with members of Duncan's Chinese community regarding the future of their downtown dwellings.

The picturesque Chinatown has dwindled over the years starting with the removal of a colorful, many-verandah hotel which was the subject of visiting artists.

Only four buildings still stand.

OUTSIDE CITY

"No definite decision has been made yet," Quaife told Ald. G. A. Kerr who brought the question up at a council meeting.

"However, he have a number of proposals, he said. "One is to locate elsewhere downtown and another to remove them to a site outside the city."

The Forest Museum has been suggested as one.

Ald. Kerr said he had it "on good authority" the Chinese community "has funds to spruce up the buildings a bit if they remain on their present site."

APPOINTED to head of the new wood product promotion division of the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia is F. N. Walsh. He was formerly general manager of the plywood manufacturers' division of the council. Walsh will be responsible for co-ordinating wood product promotion work in Canada, the United States, the United Kingdom, continental Europe, Australia and all areas the council enters.

Olympic Training For Riders

COBBLE HILL — Western Canadian riders for the first time will have the opportunity to participate in an Olympic training course May 10 to 17 at Pine Paddocks indoor riding ring on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Likely talent will be scouted for competition in the 1972 Olympics in Germany.

The course will be conducted by Hans Renz, trainer of the Canadian equestrian three-day event team, which successfully took part in the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico.

Canada was one of only three of the 14 teams to complete the gruelling event. The three-day event training will be incorporated in the intensive week-long course.

Renz, a riding instructor trained in Germany, hopes to assist in improving the calibre of Western Canadian horses and riders, look for horses that are good prospects for international competition and encourage amateur competitors.

Agricultural Programs Asked At New College

NANAIMO — Malaspina College president Dr. Carleton Opgaard has been presented with a brief from Vancouver Island Exhibition Society urging institution of agricultural programs when the college opens in September.

President Jim Mills said there is a great need for agriculturists.

"It's no longer an attitude of 'my dad did it this way, so will I.' Education is very important for farmers today."

Manager of Buckerfield's, Mills said he frequently meets experts travelling Vancouver Island to teach farmers how to use new chemical fertilizers and feeds.

Farmers always express interest in new methods of farming and the college could supply invaluable aid to increased food production on the island through better land use and planting, he said.

PALDI SCHOOL CLOSING

PALDI — Another indication of the trend toward centralization of schools in larger communities will come at the end of June when Mayo Elementary School here will be closed and students bussed to Lake Cowichan next term.

Only 14 students and one teacher from this largely East Indian community attended this year. That's a drop from the 23 students and two teachers of the previous year, says Ron Kimak, secretary-treasurer of Lake Cowichan school board.

Kimak said the move will be more economical and will also give the students equal opportunities with other district children.

Mayo School, named after the East Indian family who ran a sawmill for many years at this community, is about 15 years old and has two classrooms and an activity room.

No plans have been announced for the building. Paldi is about half-way between Duncan and Lake Cowichan.

Williston To Open Museum

NORTH COWICHAN — Resources Minister Ray Williston will officially open the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum at 2 p.m. May 17, the museum manager said today.

Gerry Wellburn said Williston will plant the first tree in the new forest area.

The opening day ceremonies will salute 50 years of truck logging on Vancouver Island with a "Parade of Progress" featuring 20 moving vehicles.

As well as railway items like the truck cycle, velocipede, hand car and speeder, there will be road vehicles from circa 1900 to the latest logging trucks, Wellburn said.

Bombers—Cheapest, Most Effective Force

OTTAWA (CP) — The Soviet Union has shown renewed interest in the manned bomber as a possible instrument of attack on North America, Lt.-Gen. F. R. Sharp, deputy commander-in-chief of the North American Air Defence Command, said Tuesday.

Gen. Sharp, a Canadian, entered a spirited rebuttal to critics of the NORAD system of defence against bombers in an appearance before the Commons committee on defence and external affairs.

Developments in the last decade have eased the necessity to protect U.S. deterrent forces, he conceded.

Not Eliminated

He cited the airborne alert of Strategic Air Command bombers, maintenance of American intercontinental missiles in hardened underground silos, and development of the Polaris missile-firing submarine.

However, the need for anti-bomber defences had by no means been eliminated, despite the growth of Russia's ballistic missile arsenal.

"The manned bomber continues to be the cheapest and most effective means for delivery of nuclear weapons. The recent increase in Soviet training flights to the periphery of North America seems to suggest a renewed interest in this means of attack.'

Such training flights have taken place mainly in the Arctic, he told committee members. Some Soviet planes had approached within 30 to 40 miles of NORAD-protected air space.

More Accurate

The bomber, said Gen. Sharp, is generally more accurate than a missile, can carry a larger payload and is more flexible.

"Moreover, the effectiveness of the bomber increases in inverse proportion to the effectiveness of the defences against it. If North American anti-bomber defences were eliminated altogether, the megatonnage which the U.S.S.R. would be able to deliver in an attack would be greatly increased.

"In addition, any other country with a nuclear capability would be able to launch an effective attack against the U.S. and Canada with relatively cheap and unsophisticated delivery systems."

Next Decade

Gen. Sharp said the Russians probably will maintain a significant bomber force "for the next decade."

It was uncertain, however, whether they would introduce a new supersonic bomber to replace the existing force. The technical capacity to produce such a bomber had been demonstrated by the recent flight of the Tupolev 144 supersonic transport plane.

"One of the objectives of a manned bomber defence is to discourage Soviet bomber development," he said.

To counter the threat from Russia's improved bombers, a combination of AWACS—Airborne Warning and Control System—and an advanced manned interceptor would be desirable, said Gen. Sharp.

Talks have been going on for some time between Canada and the U.S. on possible participation by Canadian surveillance planes in the American AWACS system.

3 Squadrons

Canada's present interceptor contribution to NORAD consists of three squadrons of CF-101 Voodoos, which fire nuclear-tipped missiles.

The U.S. contributes 18 squadrons of Voodoos and F-106 Delta-Dart interceptors, plus 21 other squadrons manned by the National Guard and equipped with first line aircraft such as the F-102 Delta Dagger.

Gen. Sharp's main presentation to the committee was contained in a written statement.

The following points emerged as he answered questions put to him by committee members at an all-day session:

- Canada pays about $135,000,000 of the operating costs of NORAD, against $1,760,000,000 paid by the U.S.
- NORAD has made a recommendation that its North Bay, Ont., control centre be equipped to take over from Colorado Springs, Colo., in the event the headquarters at Colorado Springs is knocked out in an attack. He understood the question now was under consideration by the Canadian government.
- From a strictly military point of view, the proposed ballistic missile warning system should be integrated with NORAD.
- A Soviet nuclear strike against either North America or Europe is unlikely at present; the possibility of a conventional attack, which could develop into nuclear war is greater in Europe than in North America.

EXPERTS LOOK TO SPIDER FOR BETTER GAS MASK

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — If you want to build a better gas mask, see a spider.

That's what physicists Lloyd G. Wilson and Pat Cavanagh of the Defence Research Board have been doing for the last year.

Microscopic study of spiders —the ordinary Canadian garden and household varieties—has shown the two scientists how to spin finer and finer fibres for gas mask filters.

Spiders spin their webs from filaments from six cow-like teats and the six filaments then form a single strand.

Industry now produces fibres about 1-1,000th of an inch in diameter. These fibres in gas mask filters can stop the entry of 99.98 per cent of micro-organisms, such as viruses.

Not good enough, Mr. Wilson said in an interview Tuesday.

WANTS FINER FIBRE

He is looking for a fibre 1-50,000th of an inch in diameter. The spider filament is just right but, unfortunately, spiders are a little difficult to handle to put them into commercial production.

A filter 99.98 per cent efficient permits entry of two particles out of 10,000 micro-organisms.

Mr. Wilson said a person sitting quietly breathes about 10 litres of air a minute. One litre of clean air contains about 1,000 particles, but a cloud containing a deadly biological agent could contain up to 100,000 particles a litre.

Worse, biological agents which might be used in war, multiply inside the body.

Mr. Wilson said he is looking for artificially-produced fibres which will give a filter 99.999 per cent efficiency in blocking the entry of micro-organisms. So far, he has spun artificially a fibre 1-5,000 of an inch in diameter.

Satellites Pin-Point Route for Queen

ABOARD THE QE 2 (AP) — The Queen Elizabeth 2, nearing New York on her maiden crossing with 1,400 passengers and eight dogs, uses four United States Navy satellites to pinpoint her position to within 100 feet.

For watch officers of the $72,000,000 liner, it means the days of dead reckoning and sextant are numbered.

Instead, antennae in the Queen's graceful foremast pick up signals from the satellites and transmit them to a minicomputer in the liner's chart room. Within 20 second, out comes a string of figures showing the position.

On the bridge there is no engine-room telegraph, no quartermaster at the wheel, just a row of buttons on a streamlined console. Buttons send signals to the engine room. A tiny tiller that for most of the time is set automatically keeps the ship dead on the course set and checked by half a dozen navigational aids.

WARNS OF DEVIATIONS

The latest in radar equipment not only picks up objects 24 miles ahead, it can be set to watch selected "blips" on the screen and ring warning bells if they deviate from their expected course.

The Queen Elizabeth 2 is the first passenger ship to have her own mortuary, although no one makes a big thing of it in cruise commercials. It also has a synagogue, dog kennels and sauna baths.

Complete Apartheid Aim of South Africa

By ANTHONY WHITE

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) — South Africa is working on plans to break down the few remaining points of everyday contact between whites and non-whites—by banning the employment of African women in stores and offices nationalized by whites.

Legislation before Parliament giving the government tighter control over the employment of Africans in white areas is aimed at taking South Africa one step further along the long road to its aim of total separation of the races.

Dr. Piter Koornhof, deputy minister for Bantu administration, announcing the new legislation to a public meeting in early April, said a major item of government policy is to eliminate friction between whites and non-whites.

One way to do this, he said, is to end the growing use of African women who serve whites as store assistants, typists, saleswomen and receptionists.

A bill previously introduced in the House of Assembly will empower the government to achieve this by prohibiting the employment of Bantu people in specified jobs or in specified areas.

Another way to break down friction—again by removing the cause—is to prevent Africans from buying liquor in white areas, said Koornhof, who is emerging as a foremost government spokesman on apartheid and one of the ideology's chief theoreticians.

The legislation is part of a government plan to stop the drift of country Africans seeking work to white areas and eventually to turn it in the other direction—to the special homelands created for them, leaving the white areas totally white.

Kornhof's speech amounted to an essential statement on the ideals of apartheid—and an attempt to justify its ideological and practical rightness.

"The aim of separate development," he said, "is motivated by altruistic considerations, such as bringing about the national self-realization of every separate nation.

"The task of the white man is to detach himself economically more and more from the Bantu and to create existence possibilities for the Bantu inside his homeland, and to educate him to enable him to absorb the physical development that is offered to him so that he will ultimately be capable of controlling it himself."

Welfare Need Study Launched

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government plans a $29,000 computer study of welfare needs and services in the Greater Vancouver area, Grace McCarthy, minister without portfolio, announced Tuesday.

The report on the cost-benefits study will be due Jan. 31, 1970, she told 200 social welfare workers and municipal representatives at a meeting here.

She said the program could result in a revolutionary change in social welfare in Canada.

"I am concerned about the apparent competition among social agencies, the apparent duplication of services and the gaps in the service," she said.

She said welfare services now were good for yesterday and cope as best they can with the needs of today. But they could be "overwhelmed tomorrow."

"Unless we can get and define tangible results we should examine closely the agency's programs and our fiscal participation."

Clubs Would Push Swinging Image

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians are "exciting, colorful, adventurous and gay people," says Leonard L. Knott, and he wants to make sure they find out about it.

Mr. Knott, chairman of a Montreal public relations firm, told a service club luncheon last week he plans to establish community clubs across the country to promote the signing, dancing Canadian image.

The clubs, to be called the Friends of Feux-Follets, after the French-Canadian folk-dancing group, will seek to emphasize national harmony.

Mr. Knott said the acclaim given the Feux-Follets "was the first indication that Canadians were tired of arguing about Canada and interested in just enjoying it."

"The real supporters of Feux Follets are the men and women who believe that Canada is much too big, too beautiful and too important to be strangled by a foolish controversy. They are the ones who are banding together to form the friends of Feux Follets."

Les Feux Follets was established in 1962 as a public park entertainment troupe by the Montreal department of parks and playgrounds. The 65-members turned professional in 1966 and made their first tour of Western Canada.

In 1967 the troupe made its first trans-Canada tour and also visited the U.S. and Western Europe. During Expo 67, Feux Follets performed at the Canadian pavilion.

Injured Woman Will Ski Again

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 47-year-old Vancouver woman says she will ski again next season, despite a 24-hour ordeal with a broken leg at the 5,000-foot level of the Mount Baker ski area.

Anne Marie Rosenbluth was swept away by an avalanche and was buried up to her neck for 13 hours with a broken leg. She spent the remainder of the 24 hours in a sleeping bag on a tiny snow platform.

"But this has not put me off skiing," she said Monday night from her bed in Vancouver General Hospital.

"I shall be back up there next fall."

Mrs. Rosenbluth said she was making her first run Saturday down the north slope of Shuksan Arm.

"I was looking for the more difficult way down when a small avalanche swept me away.

"I was pinned against a tree and my leg was broken. The snow buried me almost up to my neck."

It was 13 hours before the ski patrol, called out by Mrs. Rosenbluth's husband and her son, David, 18, located the spot.

"It was dark and I heard them shout rescue. It was the nicest thing I ever heard anybody say."

Ski patrollers dug Mrs. Rosenbluth out of the snow and built a small platform for her to lie on.

"It was too late to get me out so they gave me first aid and then put me in a parka and sleeping bag.

"They said the temperature never went below 34 degrees. I was lucky it was so warm because I had only my sweater on when I skied down."

Mrs. Rosenbluth was brought out early Sunday on a snow vehicle. She was taken to hospital at Bellingham and then transferred to Vancouver.

"The people up there were fantastic," she said.

"During the search they covered the mountain like an anthill."

He'd Be Disappointed With 10 Million Letters!

Ask people to note their thoughts, and you'll hit a responsive chord all over the world.

A mother in Indiana will "thank you for letting me think."

An underground revolutionary in Detroit will chastise you for wasting your money on such a project.

An 85-year-old man will write out his life history from a hospital bed, and a 10-year-old girl will talk to you for half an hour about her views on life.

These are some of the replies received by Dr. Harold Foster, who is in charge of the University of Victoria's World Think-In project.

Dr. Foster started sending out the first of 25,000 English-language questionnaires last week. Recipients are asked for answers to general questions about government, industry, cities and human resources.

He has just received a letter from Italy, his first response from outside North America.

Purpose of the project is to get literate people from many countries to contribute their thoughts on how to make the world a better place. The questionnaire is being translated into Chinese for distribution in Hong Kong and mainland China, if possible.

"I'll be disappointed if I don't receive 10 million letters," Dr. Foster said. "The mail seems to be doubling every day."

100 ALREADY

More than 100 replies have come in during the first week, and the questionnaire has been broadcast by 70 radio stations in Canada.

It has also been picked up by the CBS network in the United States and the UPI wire service.

Replies will be classified and stored in the university computer for future information print-outs.

Interest in the project is growing rapidly. Dr. Foster has accepted invitations to speak on hot-line radio shows in San Francisco and Montreal.

Tuesday night he will discuss his project and talk to callers on a New Westminster radio station.

Royal Jubilee Hospital will install parking meters effective June 1 for out-patients and short-stay callers at main entrances.

On the same date, new rates will be effective for un-metered parking enclosures used by the bulk of visitors and employees.

The new rates reflect fee reductions brought in during March after some visitors protested charges that reached 75 cents for four hours.

The meters will be installed at the hospital main entrance, the maternity hospital main entrance and to accommodate laboratory and physiotherapy out-patients.

Both half-hour and one-hour meters will be installed at a rate of five cents per half hour.

General public parking area will have toll-operated gates removed and replaced by ticket-dispensing machines.

Ten-cent and twenty-five-cent tickets will be dispensed and rates will work out to 10 cents an hour, 20 cents for two hours, 25 cents for four hours and 50 cents for all-day parking.

WILL BE WARNED

The parking lots will be patrolled by Central Contract Parking Company and cars parked overtime will be warned. Repeated warnings will result in cars being towed away at a cost to the owner of $8.

Employees in future will pay either $3 or $4 per month depending upon the parking location.

Money changing machines will be installed at the entrance to each parking area.

In 1966 hospital parking lots brought in revenue of $19,917 and in 1967 the revenue was $15,475. On July 1, 1967, rental television and parking lot operation was leased to Royal Jubilee Development Society and 1968 revenues were not shown in the hospital's annual report.

The development society also accepts donations and bequests to the hospital, makes various investments and aims to create a sizeable fund for capital financing of hospital improvements.

Ends Revolt

JAKARTA (Reuters) — The Indonesian government said today its troops have regained control of a highlands area in West Irian where primitive tribesmen staged a brief uprising against Indonesian rule.

Air Marshal Budiaedjo, minister of information, said mopping up operations are continuing in the Enarotali area in the central western highlands of West Irian.

Clinic Set to Move Into New Institute

The re-organized provincial mental health clinic in Victoria is moving within a week to the new Eric Martin Institute on Lee Avenue.

The clinic will have two directors, one for Victoria and one for Saanich, with long-range plans to add a third director and another clinic in the Duncan-Alberni area.

Provincial consultant in community psychiatry, Dr. R. G. Congdon, said the provincial mental health clinic now located at 1904 Fort will be demolished.

"The new organization is a rationalization of services on the basis of geography," he said.

TWO TEAMS

He said the reorganization has not involved an increase in staff, but the present staff has been divided into two teams to staff clinics for Victoria and Saanich.

"It was formerly the South Vancouver Island Clinic," he said. "But the population has shifted and increased and we felt the two clinics were needed."

The reorganization was started after the resignation in April of the clinic's director Dr. A. R. Stewart.

The new director for Victoria is Dr. Arturo Aranas with Dr. John T. Wood named director for Saanich.

Mrs. Jordan Named

VERNON (CP) — Pat Jordan, minister without portfolio, has been renominated as Social Credit candidate for North Okanagan in the next provincial election. Mrs. Jordan was first elected in 1966.

HOME GARDEN

It's Still Too Chilly

By HILDA BEASTALL

Don't hurry the house plants outdoors too early in this month of May. Some of the days are sunny, and warm enough for the gardener to be outdoors without a jacket but frequently winds are chilly.

Hilda

Nights are cooler still, down to near frost in some areas.

The difference between 70 deg. F. indoors and 30 deg. F. outdoors is obviously 40. This is too great a change for any plant which has been growing in the house.

Potted azaleas, chrysanthemums and Easter-lilies, all of which have green growth on them, are among the house plants to put outdoors for summer.

But summer is not yet. Wait until the end of May or even into June if nights should remain cool.

Azaleas will need to be kept growing. No rest period, or drying-off, for these plants.

Keep them supplied with moisture and a daily light spray over the foliage while in the house.

This attention encourages new growth tips which will produce flower buds by fall. If the plants are brought back into the house by about late September the buds will open during winter indoors.

If potted chrysanthemums have lost their green leaves, cut back the stems and plant the roots outdoors in a sunny spot with plenty of humus in the soil.

New shoots will probably come and a few flowers may be produced on the plants in fall. Don't expect too much, however, for these are cool-weather plants which have been subjected to house temperatures for a long period.

Easter-lilies must be encouraged to keep green as long as possible to build up the bulb. Keep indoors until weather is warmer, giving a little bulb fertilizer and water.

The bulbs may put up a small flower stem in fall, but in later years will bloom in July outdoors.

YOUR HEALTH

Parkinson's Disease Experiment

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

As most of us know, parkinsonism is a common disease, usually of older people, which causes the sufferer to have a mask-like face, a big tremor of one hand, a peculiar walk with the stiff body bent over forward, some weakness of muscles, a monotonous voice, and other nervous symptoms. The patients have not always been helped by the several drugs commonly used.

Alvarez

Many have been greatly helped by the brain operation using extreme cold, developed by Dr. Irving S. Cooper at St. Barnabas Hospital in New York City. Unfortunately, not everyone can benefit from Dr. Cooper's operation; people in whom the disease has caused much aging, and people in whom the disease is advancing rapidly, are often ruled out as subjects for the operation. A really active drug is much needed.

Some months ago I began to read articles on splendid results that had been obtained in many cases with a powerful drug called L-Dopa. Today I read that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration people have been reluctant to accept the 300 or more reports of excellent results. For a while there was talk of spending $3.3 million on research on another 600 cases, but I hear that that project has now been abandoned.

Today, if I had Parkinson's disease, I would go to a professor of neurology at the nearest medical school to see if he had some of the drug "for experimental purposes," and I would ask him to try it on me. Some physicians accuse the FDA people of being too greatly conservative and fearful, while others marvel at the poisonous drugs that they sometimes okay. I often wish that the FDA would consent to a sort of "trial marriage" with promising drugs — withdrawing approval later if the drug proves to be useless and possibly harmful.

★ ★ ★

I just read a remarkable article in the Medical World News and also Science News Letter, about what was discussed at a congress of 200 scientists held recently in West Berlin to learn what success has been achieved in producing "test-tube babies" —in producing growth of fertilized ova outside of a womb. For some years men in many laboratories have been working on this problem, and many have achieved some success. Still many details of the process must be worked out, but it is hoped that someday a fertilized human ovum (microscopic egg) can be placed in an infertile woman's womb so that she can have the child which she wants so much.

Some remarkable work has been done in the Institute for Cancer Research in Philadelphia by Dr. Beatrice Mintz. She is producing many thousands of mice by bringing together two tiny fertilized mouse embryos that have started to develop, and then implanting them in the womb of a foster mother mouse. Similar work is being carried out in many laboratories in several countries, but still many difficulties must be overcome.

★ ★ ★

Already some religious people are getting excited, wondering whether it is moral to do such a thing, but as one man said at the congress, "Like it or not, the technical know-how for test-tube fertilization and genetic manipulation is clearly within the grasp of today's scientists, although their actual application seems remote and problematical."

Camel Pack Trains Proved Unsuccessful

By BOB BOWMAN

British Columbia once had a herd of camels and there are pictures to prove it. In 1862 thousands of prospectors from many parts of the world were searching for gold in the interior, known as the Cariboo country, which is hot and arid. They got their supplies by pack trains of mules and horses that came all the way from the coast through dangerous and difficult country.

Bowman

A syndicate including Frank Laumeister, Henry Ingram and Adam Heffley got the idea that camels would be better than horses or mules. They could carry far heavier loads, and get along without drinking water for long periods of time. So they managed to buy 23 Bactrian camels in San Francisco and they were brought to Victoria by ship in November, 1862.

One day a little boy came running home and told his father that he had seen wild beasts with humps on their backs walking along the road. Father did not believe him, of course, but eventually responded to the boy's pleading and went to see for himself.

A Victoria newspaper reported the scene: "As soon as his eyes fastened upon the monsters, his own courage departed and with blanched cheeks and trembling steps he hastily regained the shelter of his own home."

The camels were taken to New Westminster by ship on May 7, 1862, and began their work on the rugged trail to the Cariboo. Some plans are great in theory but not so good in practice and that is what happened in the case of the camels. They were so smelly that they frightened the horses and mules they met along the way, causing them to stampede.

The camels also suffered foot injuries in the rocky terrain and could not continue. The experiment was abandoned within a year, but some of the camels were put on farms and lived for many years. The last one died on the Henry Ingram ranch near Vernon in 1910.

Fun with Figures

By J.A.H. HUNTER

Peter picked an invoice from the pile on his desk. "Here's a funny one," he said. "D'you get it?"

John looked. "Kalips at 9c an ounce, and no discount for quantity," he commented. "But I see what you mean. They come to as many dollars as the ounces, and as many cents as the pounds."

That was it. What was the amount?

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Fernandes Sandlain, age 10, of Douglas, Arizona, for his question:

Which planet has the most moons

Most likely all the larger moons of the Solar System have been discovered. But from time to time small ones are discovered and the list of known satellites grows longer. The newcomers are too tiny to be seen through ordinary telescopes. The are spotted on detailed photographic plates by sharp-eyed researchers. The last known moon of Jupiter was spotted in 1914, bringing the number to 12. So far as we know, this is the largest number of satellites belonging to any planet of our Solar System. However, two or three more may or may not be added to Saturn's ten known moons in the future. Nobody is certain.

From what we know at the moment, giant Jupiter is the winner. And now is an excellent time to see four of them for yourself. All you need is a pair of good binoculars or a smallish telescope, some free time in the evenings and a keen interest in the wonders of the heavens. Giant Jupiter shines big and bright in the south-eastern sky. To make sure of it, find the Big Dipper and extend the arch of its handle way over the sky to the bright star Archturus. Then turn toward the southeast and speed to Spica in the Y-shaped constellation Virgo.

Giant Moons

In this celestial neighborhood you will find Jupiter, outshining all the stars with its steady, golden stare. Line it up in your telescope or binoculars and chances you will see its multi-colored disc, somewhat flattened at the two poles. If the night is clear and your lenses are sharp enough, you can look for moons. The four likely ones are more or less on a level with Jupiter's equator, midway between the two flattened poles. Compared with the giant planet, they look smaller than peas beside a big beach ball Actually, they are as large or larger than our moon and with any luck at all you will see more than one of them. If you watch through several evenings you will see the move in front and behind the big planet as they orbit around it.

These four moons were spotted by the great Galileo in 1610, when he trained his little telescope on the heavens. In 1892, another very small moon was discovered orbiting much closer to Jupiter. In the 1900s, the list grew longer one by one, until seven more moons were discovered in Jupiter's family. All of them are very small and travel around wide oval orbits that are sharply tilted toward the planet's equator. Four of them travel westward, which is rather unusual. The orbit of the outer moon is about 30 million miles wide, which is a third of our distance from the sun. Maybe more will be discovered, but at present Jupiter's dozen moons are the largest known satellite family in our Solar System.

★ ★ ★

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Jonathan Melnick, age 11, of Sarasota, Florida, for his question:

Why is most amber found in the Baltic Sea?

Beautiful bits of glassy amber look somewhat like gobs of frozen honey. Actually they are complex resinous chemicals created by the plant world. Many plants manufacture resins, but the specialists are the piny evergreens. The tacky gum that oozes from a cut Christmas tree is resin. If left to dry out and become hard, in time it becomes amber. The woody cells of conifer trees contain these resins that discourage insects and add a tangy fragrance to the wood. When a tree is injured, they seal the surface of the wound from the weather. They form the hard knots in knotty pine wood and when a tree bough breaks they ooze out in great gobs that may become future amber.

Through the ages, fallen conifers tend to decay and disappear. But their glassy gobs of golden amber endure. They harden with time. Millions of years in the past, magnificent conifer forests thrived in and around the region now covered by the Baltic Sea. The woody trees decayed long ages ago, but their gobs of amber grew harder and more beautiful. We find them now along the shores and land areas around the inland sea and some are dredged up from the muddy floor under the water. The beautiful semi-precious stones are the sole survivors of ancient evergreen forests.

Soft Sell Ideals For Kids Out of Church

By SUSAN MAYSE

A totally new approach to today's young people is necessary, according to Arnold Webb—and he thinks he's found it.

"Honesty," he said.

"You have to be absolutely honest with them—you have to call a spade a spade.

"Today's kids are well educated, well informed, much more so than we were. They're critical and they're analytical, but wide open to receive ideas important to them. But you have to be completely honest with them or they won't have anything to do with you.

"And that's why we have very little generation gap in Young Life."

Webb, a committee member and former chairman, feels Young Life may be the most radical idea among groups of its kind.

ARNOLD WEBB
. . . don't steer kids

No Pressure

An interdenominational religious movement for young people of high school age, it strives to draw youth into the Christian churches—but without pressure.

Known by some as "friendship evangelism," Young Life has worked for the last 30 years, not with teens who attend churches, but with those who don't.

"We're a soft sell, quiet organization, and you probably don't hear very much about us," said Webb, who is deputy public works minister. "We don't make very much noise."

Though the group was originally founded by members of a Presbyterian church, it doesn't make any choice between churches.

"We don't try to steer kids to any one church, and we don't pressure them to go to church at all. The purpose of the movement has always been to persuade kids, those who weren't going to a church and so weren't being looked after in that way, that the Christian life was a good thing to follow.

"We consider it a success if a youngster accepts Christian ideals even if he doesn't want to attend church.

"There are clubs in the States which are all Jewish. We leave it up to the kids; they've got brains. The idea there would be to promote interest in their own faith and possibly attendance at their synagogue. Or if they wanted to try it another way, it would be up to them."

Planned Campaign

Building a Young Life group in a city is a deliberate and carefully planned procedure, Webb said.

First a committee of interested businessmen who will support the group financially is formed, and "leaders" who work with the students are brought in.

These may be volunteers who have been members previously and had some training, or full-time professional workers who have graduated from university and also taken three years of training in Young Life procedure and theology.

In Victoria there is one girl, Donna Campbell, who works full-time, and another young man who works part-time There are also a number of volunteers.

"Our leaders are astonishingly well received by the kids. Of course, with such a cross-section as you will find in a high school it's hard to say how they will be accepted. But they seem to be accepted very well."

Leaders go where the students can be found, he said—dances, ball games, meetings, drive-ins.

"This is not any slap-dash haphazard effort—they're trained in working with the kids."

Victoria has clubs in most of its high schools since high school age is considered the best time to reach the young people, because of their openness and growing awareness, and because of the diversity of types found there.

In Victoria since Young Life was founded here in 1961, about 500 students have been involved at any one time, Webb estimates.

Greased Pig Chase

A normal Young Life meeting will be a session of an hour at the home of one of the members, but there are also such events as the frantic gremlin hunt last week which turned into a greased-pig chase.

As many as 200 to 300 kids regularly turn out for these events, Webb said, although regular meetings are smaller and quieter.

A summer-long camp at Jervis Inlet which members may attend for a week is another feature of the group.

"We give them the best week's vacation of their life at Malibu Camp, and also try to persuade them the Christian life is worthy of study," Webb said.

Webb said he expected churches in the area to take on the deeper responsibility of taking the young people into their congregations.

"There have been a few churches which have made a point of spending time with younger people, and they have been remarkably successful. They're always packed with kids."

Meanwhile, he said, honesty is the best approach, and the only one acceptable to the youngsters.

'Shadow Over Court' Rep. Celler Claims

WASHINGTON (WP) — In an 11th hour attempt to stave off imprisonment for stock manipulation, financier Louis Wolfson successfully appealed to members of congress to plead his cause with President Nixon.

Congressional sources, who reported this Tuesday, say that Nixon declined to see the lawmakers on the advice of Attorney General John N. Mitchell. An aide to Sen Spessard Holland (D—Fla.) quoted Mitchell as telling the senator April 22 that "clarifying developments" within 10 days to two weeks would indicate why Nixon should not be involved "at this time."

In the two weeks since the Mitchell-Holland conversation, Life magazine has reported a $20,000 consultant's fee to Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas in 1966 from the Wolfson family foundation. Whatever this may do to clarify the administration's decision, the disclosure left a great deal else still up in the air.

Chairman James O. Eastland (D—Miss.) of the senate judiciary committee said Tuesday there is discussion—but no decision—within the committee about the issuance of a formal invitation to Justice Fortas to discuss the $20,000 fee, which Fortas later returned.

Chairman Emanuel Celler (D—N.Y.) of the house judiciary committee called the Fortas incident "a shadow over the court" and declared that "the shadow has got to be removed." Celler said he had been studying the situation, but has not made up his mind what to do.

After a Republican leadership meeting at the White House, Senate GOP leader Everett Dirksen and house leader Gerald Ford suggested that congress consider legislation requiring supreme court justices to make public sources of outside income. Later house speaker John McCormack endorsed the idea of public disclosure by federal judges.

The principal development of the day, however, was the news of the intercession on behalf of Wolfson by several members of congress two weeks ago.

Bucher Happy With Outcome

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both the United States Congress and the White House appear willing to close the Pueblo case along lines set by the secretary of the navy: No punishments but no declarations of innocence.

And the principal figure, Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher, said he is satisfied with that outcome.

Time and more pressing concerns have dissipated most of the high feeling that once prompted congressional demands for fixing the blame in the capture of the U.S. ship by North Korea more than 16 months ago.

Navy Secretary John H. Chafee said Tuesday he was rejecting recommendations of a navy court of inquiry for disciplinary moves that would have included a general court martial for Bucher, the ship's captain, and Lieut. Stephen R. Harris, who commanded the ship's intelligence unit.

Chafee said there would be no punishment for any navy personnel connected with the incident.

ACCEPT HIS DECISION

Key congressional figures close to the case indicated they accepted Chafee's decision.

Senator John Stennis (Dem. Miss.), chairman of the Senate armed services committee, saw no firm reason for pursuing the case further.

Representative Otis Pike (Dem. N.Y.), chairman of a House of Representatives armed services subcommittee that investigated the Pueblo, backed Chafee.

"The navy took a hard-line position which the secretary tempered with mercy," Pike said.

At the White House, press secretary Ronald Ziegler said there is no reason for president Nixon to review Chafee's findings.

CRITICAL OF INQUIRY

Senator Peter Dominick (Rep. Colo.), issued the only congressional call for pressing the case. But he said his concern was not the actions of the personnel involved but "the question of the breakdown in communications."

Dominick, who had long held the navy was trying to make Bucher a scapegoat, said the recommendations of the court of inquiry were "simply ridiculous."

Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird says Bucher's future in the navy "does look good to me."

Chafee said: "I do not think the outcome of the Pueblo case puts Bucher under a cloud for the rest of his life."

Bucher's own feelings: "He is awaiting his next duty assignment and feels that his success will depend on how he performs in it," his lawyer, E. Miles Harvey, told reporters.

It may take two or three years to tell whether these assessments prove accurate.

That's when Bucher will come up before his navy peers who will consider whether to select him for promotion to captain. He became a commander July 1, 1967, and generally would be eligible for promotion in four to six years from that date.

MOST MADE IT

About 75 per cent of the 1,000 navy commanders eligible this year were chosen for promotion to four-stripe rank, said the navy.

Bucher's official record will not show any evidence that a court of inquiry recommended he be court-martialled in connection with the capture of his ship.

Chafee's action Tuesday dismissing all charges in the Pueblo case made sure of that.

But the naval officers who sit on the selection board also can be expected to have formed some personal opinions in the Pueblo case.

"Service reputation sometimes counts as much as service record," said one veteran officer in talking about promotion boards.

Student Protest Blamed on U.S.

OTTAWA (CP)—Student disturbances at University of British Columbia, Simon Fraser University and other Canadian university campuses were linked by the RCMP Tuesday to visits by militant agitators from the United States in testimony given before the Commons justice committee.

The connection was traced by W. H. Kelly, RCMP deputy commissioner for operations.

Commissioner Kelly also drew a connecting line between the Black Power movement in the U.S. and the same movement in Canada.

He also warned of the danger of a linkup between what he called "red and black power."

OPERATIONS STUDIED

The RCMP was studying operations of the Black Power movement and of the New Left— a neo-Communist movement.

Commissioner Kelly, appearing as a witness before the committee, was asked by Doug Hogarth (L—New Westminster) whether the RCMP had found any evidence of subversive activity in campus upheavals that have occurred reecntly in Canada.

He replied: "We have a feeling, but no particular proof."

The RCMP had found that any "real serious demonstration" at a university could be related to the action of a militant leader.

He gave these examples:

- The occupation of the faculty building at University of British Columbia followed a visit by a leader from the U.S.
- A disturbance at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, B.C., was preceded by a lot of discussion about "this kind of leadership."
- A disturbance at Windsor University was preceded by a visit by someone from Germany.
- Disturbances at Sir George Williams and McGill Universities in Montreal followed visits by "people from the United States."
- A visitor from the U.S. called at Halifax before the disturbances there last year.

The deputy commissioner said he was satisfied that leaders of different radical groups are trying to consolidate their organization.

Student groups, whose leadership was "very leftist," were part of the system. He cited developing contacts between students and labor.

Before the Magistrate

Frederick B. Sexton, 20, of 2706 Claude, was sentenced Tuesday to six to 12 months in the Young Offenders Unit.

He was convicted earlier of breaking out of the former Broad Street Youth Centre after committing theft.

Magistrate William Ostler said Sexton was entitled to sympathy because of emotional difficulties.

"I think there is a great deal to be gained by a short period in the Young Offenders' Unit and a period on parole," he said.

He said the unit had adequate facilities for education and opportunities for guidance and training which the accused needed.

"He will come out a great deal better off," he said.

Two other persons were sentenced to jail terms earlier on the same charge.

Police said the three youths stayed inside the centre until it was closed. A small amount of money was taken from the soft drink machine.

Garry Plant, 32, was sentenced to six months after pleading guilty to two charges of false pretences arising in Manitoba in 1967.

The term will run concurrently with a 12-month term imposed in January on a similar charge. He is now at William Head minimum security prison.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Plant's probably release date was Nov. 17 this year and said he had a record dating to 1965 for similar offences.

Magistrate Ostler warned Plant he couldn't waste any more of his life with this sort of criminal activity.

Trial of Jay Small, 112 McKenzie, charged with possession of marijuana, will continue May 20.

The trail was delayed because a police officer witness is ill.

Court was told Small was arrested April 4 after a small plastic bag containing a green leafy substance was found in his hand. He was searched on Cook Street by police.

Francis H. Carr, 3390 Woodburn, was fined $350 for impaired driving. Frederick G. Holmes, 2770 Sea View, was fined $300 on the same charge.

Leo E. Orr, 3077 Admirals, was fined $300 for dangerous driving.

Douglas Hay, 4055 Wiseton, was fined $300 Monday for impaired driving.

Talks to Resume

It's Oneupmanship In the Dinner Game

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals and Conservatives appear set for a oneupmanship battle over political fund-raising dinners.

The Liberals charged $50 a plate last month for a dinner speech by Prime Minister Trudeau in Calgary.

The Conservatives are charging $100 a plate for a luncheon speech by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield at Moncton Friday.

The luncheon is oversold. The target was set at 100 tickets and 125 persons now want to get in.

And a lot of Calgarians complained that they couldn't get in to see Mr. Trudeau at $50 for a ticket.

The Conservatives aren't making the same mistake in Moncton.

Besides the Friday luncheon, there will be an evening reception for all who want to come. The charge will be $1 for coffee and sandwiches.

Mr. Trudeau will receive an honorary degree from the University of Moncton Sunday, May 18, eight days after Mr. Stanfield's fund-raising efforts in the railway centre.

Mr. Trudeau will go by train to Campbellton, N.B., May 17 and will likely visit several towns on New Brunswick's north shore by car and helicopter the following day before going on to Moncton.

Mr. Stanfield will receive an honorary degree from St. Mary's University in Halifax Monday.

Job a Challenge To Get Best Value

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — James Richardson looks upon his new cabinet job, minister of supply and services, as a challenge to see that the taxpayer is getting the best value for his money.

The Winnipeg-born wartime bomber pilot and rising star of the financial world until he entered the Trudeau cabinet on its formation last year, becomes the federal government's number one purchaser and warehouser.

His new department also provides business consultant services to all other government departments.

Taking over from Supply Minister Don Jamieson, who was moved up Monday to become transport minister in succession to Paul Hellyer, Richardson, 47, also bows out of the work he has been doing on drafting a new national aviation policy for Canada.

This work now will be carried on by transport department officials working under Jamieson, but Richardson will still be able to put forth his views on the subject at cabinet and cabinet committee meetings.

HAS WIDE SCOPE

A few minutes after being sworn in as supply minister in the office of Chief Justice John R. Cartwright, Richardson said in an interview the new department has almost unlimited scope for examining the cost of government programs in relation to the benefits derived from them.

This, he said, is "what I am sure the Canadian public would like to see done.

The supply department is the old department of defence production, with the comptroller of the treasury service added to it. It now is the chief buyer and inventory controller for all government departments, was as well as supplying them with accounting, electronic computing, and management consultant services.

Richardson was first elected to the Commons in the 1968 general election, his first effort at politics of any kind since being elected president of his political science and economics class at Queen's University.

Fifty-three days from his nomination as Liberal candidate in Winnipeg South riding, he was elected and appointed a minister without portfolio in the Trudeau cabinet as an understudy to Mr. Hellyer.

To go into politics, he gave up the chairmanship of the investment firm of James Richardson and Sons, Ltd., and a string of company directorships, including the CPR, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, International Nickel Co., and Hudson's Bay Co. His sizeable personal fortune was put into fixed-income securities.

Aussies Gripped By Wheat Crisis

By VINCENT MATTHEWS
CP Correspondent

CANBERRA (CP) — Australia faces the most serious crisis in the history of its wheat industry.

Unless it is settled within the next few months, it could have serious consequences for the government at the federal election due in November.

The crux of the problem is that Australian farmers are growing more wheat than the country can consume or sell. Complicating matters is the high price for the wheat which the government guarantees growers. And they get most of the price in advance.

Prospects are that next season's wheat harvest will be at least as big as this year's 535,000,000 bushels. This would mean that 700,000,000 bushels —unsold stocks from this year and the new season—would be overflowing from storage bins and rotting on farms.

If the government sticks to its agreement to pay $1.10 (Australian) a bushel in advance, it will face an $800,000,000 payout to Australia's 60,000 wheat growers. Such a payment, economists warn, would cause a serious inflation risk in a country already suffering from inflation fears.

RISKS FUTURE

The federal minister for primary industry and deputy leader of the Country party, Douglas Anthony, 39, is staking his political future on solving the wheat problem. He is due to take over the Country party leadership from John McEwen, 68, trade minister, some time next year. Failure on the wheat issue could seriously jeopardize his chances.

Anthony warned in Parliament that there would be utter chaos during the next wheat harvest unless growers agreed to changes.

Anthony has been under pressure to get wheat growers and state governments to agree to a scheme which will limit the deliveries of wheat from the coming crop and at the same time permit the federal government still to pay $1.10 a bushel in advance. The growers get further payments when the wheat is sold.

The need for such a scheme became obvious after last season's crop was harvested. The Australian Wheat Board, which markets the grain, had to handle more than 500,000,000 bushels.

Storage facilities are overflowing with 200,000,000 bushels from this crop—and now there is the prospect of another bumper harvest.

FEAR CANADIAN MOVE

Sales to China, Australia's biggest wheat customer, have been essential in recent years for getting rid of the surplus wheat. But the international market is getting more competitive and Australian growers are anxiously watching moves by Canada to establish diplomatic relations with Peking. This would, it is felt, put Canada at a big advantage in any sales talk with the Chinese.

If the government has to pay out a massive $800,000,000 to the wheat growers it means there will be less money available for spending in other areas such as social welfare and defence—issues that will become vital in an election year.

There are two courses the government can take. It can cut the advance payment to 75 cents a bushel or it can declare a quota system. Under the quota system, the government would make the full advance payment on only about 375,000,000 bushels, thus compelling growers to restrict production

The Australian wheat growers' federation has proposed to its members that the quota system be accepted. Anthony agrees with it, too.

But before the system can be implemented, state governments must pass legislation. And state governments, run by men with their fingers on the local political pulse, are reluctant to do anything that might upset wheat growers.

Federal and state ministers of agriculture met to try to sort out the tangle but failed.

So Anthony can only hope that his Country party colleagues will convince growers that they must voluntarily restrict wheat growing. But, as one commentator put it:

"That's like asking Country party followers to cut their own throats."

PROCEDURE WRANGLE STALLS STRIKE TALKS

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiators met today for the first time in more than a week in an attempt to settle the Air Canada strike, but the talks broke off after less than 15 minutes when the bargainers were unable to agree on an agenda.

They planned to hold separate caucus sessions and get together again later in the day.

Charles Eyre, chief Air Canada negotiator, said the talks were broken off to allow the two sides "to consider procedure" and decide what issues should be discussed first.

Fighting Traps Village

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The mountain village of Hasbaya in southern Lebanon, hard by the Israeli border, is under siege by about 2,000 Syrian-backed Arab guerrillas, government sources in Beirut said today.

Lebanese troops have been locked in combat for several days with guerrillas of the Al Saika group, affiliated with neighboring Syria's governing Baath party.

The clashes have increased steadily and reached a peak Tuesday in a day-long clash. A Beirut communique said at least one Lebanese soldier was killed in the battle which raged near the town of Kater Rikha about seven miles from Hasbaya.

For the first time the Lebanese army identified its opponents as "non-Palestinian armed groups," leading to speculation that the guerrillas were Syrian infiltrators.

Hasbaya lies in a strategic region of south Lebanon which the guerrillas have tried to turn into a launching area for forays into Israel.

The Lebanese army communique places the blame for the latest clashes squarely on the Al Saika — Thunderbolt — organization. Lebanese say their prisoners have all been non-Palestinians and at least one of the guerrilla dead is from the Syrian port of Latakia.

CRITICIZE GOVERNMENT

Renewed fighting in the south touched off angry Lebanese press attacks against the Baathist regime in Syria.

"Our army repulses another Syrian aggression," headlined one newspaper. Another branded the Syrian guerrillas as "snakes."

The leftist Al Shaab newspaper called for a summit conference between Syria and Lebanon to discuss the border tension.

Al Saika has denied it is involved in the fighting and called for a commission of the Lebanese army and guerrilla groups to investigate the clashes.

Lebanon is trying to hammer out an agreement with the guerrilla movement over its demands to use Lebanon as a base.

RIOT KILLED 18

Two weeks ago some of Lebanon's 160,000 Palestinian refugees demonstrated in support of the guerrillas, and in rioting that resulted 18 persons were killed and more than 100 injured. The riots led to the resignation of Premier Rashid Karami, and the country is still without a new government.

Al Fatah, most powerful of the Arab commando organizations, warned Lebanon to "lift the siege around Palestine refugee camps," free imprisoned supporters of the movement and let Palestinian guerrillas operate unhampered from Lebanese soil. The warning was broadcast from Cairo Tuesday following a Lebanese army announcement that it would take "military deterrent measures" against the guerrillas in Lebanon.

Meanwhile, an Israeli army spokesman reported a two-hour artillery battle Tuesday one mile southeast of the Sea of Galilee. He said Jordanian rocket and mortar fire was directed at settlements near Tel Qazir and Israeli guns fired back.

WELCOME worthy of marine royalty was extended the $72 million British luxury liner Queen Elizabeth II as she sailed into New York harbor today on her maiden voyage. Bus, Ferry Halt Possible

Possibility of a giant transportation tie-up hangs over Vancouver Island like a black cloud today.

Cessation of Air Canada services April 20 was a blow to vacationers and businessmen alike—but generally alternate travel routes appeared.

Now an additional airline stoppage and crippling halts in bus service and even ferry service are being discussed and official hand-wringing is beginning among travel-sensitive Victorians.

Looming large is the possibility of a black summer in this emerging picture:

- Air Canada negotiators and negotiators for the machinists union are bogged down on wage issues.
- CP Air machinists, following a breakdown in their contract talks, have applied for a conciliation board. No strike vote has been called and could not take place until Ottawa decides against a board, or a board report has been made and rejected—which would take at least two weeks. But with CP Air bearing the brunt in Air Canada's absence from the skies, the union has a tactical advantage which could bring matters soon to a head.
- There is a real threat of a strike of Vancouver Island Coach Lines drivers following a breakdown in negotiations April 23. A strike could result after May 15.
- There are continuing murmurs of strike or slowdown in the B.C. Ferry Service. Dissatisfaction remained after settlement of a strike last year because the union claims the government has not fully honored commitments for wage parity with private coastwise shipping lines.

Victoria's location on an island gives any such threats greater substance.

'Would Be Virtually Isolated'

Victoria Visitors' Bureau reported that so far the Air Canada strike has had little effect on tourists arriving here because most come by car and ferry. Spokesmen concede a ferry strike would be disastrous—and a bus strike crippling.

Chamber of Commerce president Claire Copeland said "If all the things that could happen do happen, we will be virtually isolated . . . but it's hard to comment right now."

Two airlines serving Victoria during the Air Canada emergency say they are experiencing a growing acceptance by travellers. Neither would be greatly affected by a CP Air strike but both would be snowed under in event of a ferry or bus service interruption.

Staron Flight is operating 10 flights a day out of Patricia Bay and has doubled its passenger load in recent days. The airline says it has 20 aircraft and can call in reserves.

Air West Airlines, operating from Inner Harbor, says it operates 10 flights each way daily to Vancouver and almost all at capacity. If the connecting CP Air cross-Canada flights are stopped Air West sees little reduction in demand for its service. It has three extra planes at Nanaimo it could put in service to the mainland.

Trains Operate Near Capacity

Canadian Pacific Railway at Vancouver says a CP Air strike would find CPR able to take more traffic but not all that could be expected. CPR operates only one train a day in and out of Vancouver on trans-Canada service. They have few reserve coaches, a spokesman said.

Canadian National Railways says it has been running trains with three extra cars for the past 1½ weeks and at this point it is unable to speculate whether it could handle more traffic in event of a CP Air strike.

CP Air officials say they have been handling 50 per cent more bookings from Victoria since the cessation of Air Canada services. But they are unable to take bookings beyond a week hence.

If they should be struck they believe many persons would continue to fly east via U.S. departure points, on other lines.

(The airline recommends that persons wishing to book flights to the east should do so in evening rather than daylight hours, for best service. Calls made to CP Air here are received in the Vancouver offices.)

Air Canada local manager Stan Mooney said he estimates that 80 per cent of Victoria's air travellers are getting to their destinations with minimum difficulty while Air Canada is out of service.

"But if the ferries and buses go out . . . Lord knows."

He said Air Canada in May usually boards 10,000 passengers a month out of Victoria. About 75 per cent are destined for Vancouver or local B.C. points. About 2,500 book for trans-Canada or trans-Atlantic flights. The bulk of these would be blocked in their travel plans in event of a CP Air strike, he believed.

Land-Bank Proposal 'Not a Dead Issue'

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The new minister responsible for federal housing policy plans a series of meetings with provincial ministers and officials to discuss federal-provincial co-operation in the housing field.

Robert Andras, minister without portfolio who took over responsibility for housing in Monday's cabinet changes, said he expected the talks with the provinces to take in the controversial proposal for land banks raised by the housing task force led by former transport minister Paul Hellyer.

Although the prime minister's opposition to unconstitutional direct federal loans to the municipalities to buy and service land was one of the major reasons for Hellyer's resignation from the cabinet, Andras said the land-banks proposal was "not a dead issue."

LOAN TO PROVINCE

But he indicated that if it were taken up and agreed on with the provinces it would probably take the form of federal loans made through the provincial governments, rather than directly to the municipalities, and would provide for a federal voice in deciding how the money was used.

Andras indicated in the Commons that the long-awaited statement of federal public housing and urban renewal policy, up in the air since the publication of the Hellyer task force report in January, would be made public when legislation to amend the National Housing Act goes before the Commons.

This is now expected to be late this month or early in June. The housing act amendments are now scheduled for debate after the official languages bill, which has first priority after the omnibus Criminal Code amendments, now held up by a Creditiste filibuster.

HOLD MEETINGS

Andras said he was arranging meetings with the provincial ministers responsible for housing because "I just want to meet them, to get to talk to them, and talk to the administrative heads of the various housing agencies."

Housing, he said, was so much a provincial field of

MARIJUANA OBSCURES MORE SERIOUS PROBLEMS

The major problem in drug abuse by youngsters and teenagers is not the "hard" drugs such as heroin but their involvement with "soft" drugs.

The drug used in a particular part of the country varies depending on supply, current fad and the age of the persons involved.

Writer Keith Kincaid, in his second article on drug use in Canada, on Page 3, finds that the marijuana issue has obscured the more serious problem of amphetamines and barbituates.

Police Smash Student Sit-In

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New Hampshire and Vermont state police broke down the doors of the Dartmouth College administration building in Hanover, N.H., today and dragged, carried and escorted about 60 students from the building.

Meanwhile, in Lafayette, Ind., about 600 students "camped-in" at Purdue University's Memorial Union after state police cleared them from the administration building, only 16 hours after police ended an earlier sit-in with 229 arrests.

At Dartmouth, the helmeted police did not carry clubs and no injuries were reported.

The students, led by members of Students for a Democratic Society, seized the building Tuesday, evicted school officials and nailed the doors shut. The protesters sought an immediate end to Reserve Officer Training Corps program on campus.

The students were taken by bus to nearby Lebanon for arraignment.

Dartmouth trustees got a court injunction ordering the students to leave and forbidding them to block the building's entrances. A deputy sheriff told the protesters they had until 9 p.m. to clear out, but the deadline passed with no change in the situation.

CLEAR 300 STUDENTS

State troopers cleared 300 students from the Purdue administration building, firing a can of chemical Mace to clear the doorway. The protesters moved to the union, joining others already there.

Purdue officials backed down on an earlier decision and agreed to leave the union open all night. Many of the students there said they sought amnesty for the 229 arrested in the first sit-in, which was a protest over tuition increases.

The arrests came five hours before a convocation marking Purdue's 100th anniversary. About 350 raised clenched fists and walked silently from the convocation as President Frederick L. Hovde began to speak.

In New York, City College opened for the first time in two weeks and most of the 12,000 day students attended classes, amid some vandalism by groups of white radicals. But classes for 8,000 night students were cancelled by President Buell G. Gallagher because of "an air of tension on campus."

Retail Drug Price Talks Likely

DAWSON CREEK, B.C. (CP) Dan Campbell, British Columbia welfare minister, says Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford is anxious to call a federal-provincial conference on retail drug prices.

"Mr. Basford has indicated he wishes to review the entire delivery system at the retail level in B.C. and elsewhere in Canada," Mr. Campbell added in an interview.

Code Filibuster Stalls Several Gov't Measures

OTTAWA (CP) — Some legislation the government hoped to clean up before the June 27 parliamentary recess now will be put over until the fall because of the drawn-out debate by Creditiste MPs on amendments to the Criminal Code.

Government House Leader Donald Macdonald said in an interview Tuesday night that no decision has been made on what measures will be postponed.

But with only 18 days left for debate on government business, something would have to go, Mr. Macdonald said.

In the Commons earlier Tuesday, Mr. Macdonald said that priority items to be debated after the "extensive filibuster" on the Criminal Code bill are the government's official languages bill and amendments to the National Housing Act.

Creditiste MPs who want the government to shelve the Criminal Code changes because of clauses on homosexuality and abortion, have kept the measure before the House almost continuously since Easter.

Debate now is swirling about the sections that would permit abortion where the health of a pregnant woman is in danger. Abortion alone had tied up House business for the last two weeks.

To his embarrassment, a Liberal back-bencher helped prolong the debate with an amendment. It would allow abortion only when continued pregnancy would endanger the mother's life or seriously and directly impair her health.

Warren Allmand (L—Montreal Notre-Dame-de-Grace) said he regretted his amendment would be used by the Creditistes "as a pretext for carrying on further their filibuster."

He said their stand on the bill is "deplorable and I feel they are acting most undemocratically and are paying lip service only to the principles of democracy."

Charles-Arthur Gauthier (Creditiste—Roberval) said some of his party's MPs would support Mr. Allmand despite "his unkind words about us" and despite the fact that it didn't go as far as Creditistes thought it should.

After five Liberal MPs said they would vote for the amendment, Justice Minister John Turner said he rejected it because its wording is not as effective as the government's in limiting abortions.

SIX KILLED AS U.K. TRAIN JUMPS TRACKS

MORPETH, Eng. (Reuters) — An express train headed for Scotland jumped the rails early today, killing six passengers and injuring more than 100.

Rescuers worked through the night to free people trapped in the twisted wreckage of the London-to-Aberdeen express, which was derailed at Morpeth Station in Northumberland County.

Medical Journal Attacked: Pushing Condemned Drugs

WASHINGTON (WP) — Two medical scientists and Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D—Wis.) joined Tuesday in an unusual attack on the American Medical Association for accepting advertisements for drugs condemned by the National Academy of Sciences - National Research Council.

The criticism came at a Senate monopoly subcommittee hearing on prescription products that combine two or more drugs in fixed ratios. Such mixtures account for 83 of the 200 drugs most often prescribed.

The scientists — professors William M. M. Kirby of the University of Washington in Seattle and Heinz F. Eichenwald of the University of Texas in Dallas — headed two of the five NAS-NRC panels that evaluated the efficiency of about 90 antibiotic combinations. The Food and Drug Administration has made initial moves to end marketing of the products, which have been sold at least since 1962.

NO BENEFITS

All 30 members of the five panels agreed that the antibiotic combinations have no benefit over their ingredients used singly; at least double the risk of adverse reactions, some of which are serious or fatal; have no place in rational therapy and should not be sold.

Yet the discredited combinations continue to be massively prescribed. The witnesses testified that advertising and promotion is the primary explanation.

Dr. Kirby cited the case of Panalba, an Upjohn antibiotic combination with sales as high as $20 million a year. Panalba combines tetracycline with novobiocin, which five out of six NAS-NRC panelists said should be taken off the market on safety grounds.

Displaying two recent full-page Panalba ads in the AMA journal, Dr. Kirby said:

IMPLIED EMDORSEMENT

"In comparison with the occasional negative statements made by antibiotic experts, the positive message of this advertisement is brought repeatedly to the attention of the practising physician, and with the additional incentive of an implied endorsement, it is not surprising that the product is widely used."

Nelson said the ads violate the AMA's own code for acceptance of ads. The code says that "testimonials" for a drug are not "acceptable evidence." He and the witnesses emphasized that no controlled studies for drugs such as Panalba ever have been produced.

Arthur Mayse

The graceful white swans of Elk Lake are strong in wing and bill. Any person who attempted to snatch one from a rowboat could expect a buffeting and jabbing from which he would be lucky to escape unharmed. But even a touchy-tempered swan is no match for a fast powerboat.

Three yahoos demonstrated that fact last Saturday, to the anger and disgust of our community. As you know, they ran the bird down on the water, then shot it through the head with a weapon believed to be either a '22 calibre firearm or a high-powered pellet gun.

What you may not know is that the female birds are nesting at this season, and that once mated, they seek no other partner for life.

Perhaps we shouldn't give non-human tragedy our attention; but I don't like to think that a noble pair has been broken up for no other purpose than to provide the killers with a Saturday kick.

It was an ugly episode, and all the more so because it happened in the sanctuary of a regional district park. I hope that Saanich, present maintainer of that park, will take such steps as it can to prevent any other bloody-minded intrusions.

★

Ald. William Noel tells me that legitimate powerboat fans who use the lake have been quick to get in touch with him.

One group has promised full support in policing its members, and keeping an eye out for any acts of vandalism. Another outboard owner has pledged his craft and his services for occasional patrolling, and others may follow suit.

Such measures will help, if carried through. But I very much doubt that they'll persuade those who would have power-boating and water-skiing exiled from Elk and Beaver lakes.

As a fisherman who studies to be quiet, I'm tempted to agree with these last.

My personal view is that anyone who charges aimlessly about wasting gas when he could be trolling a line displays more energy than sense. To this soleenful utterance, I will add that water-skiers take up hell's own room with their pastime, and should barred from any body of water smaller than the Great Lakes or the oceans. Even there, they should be required to stay far off shore.

This, though, is a tribal vendetta, and I won't indulge it further. Those who enjoy such water sport do have their rights, and for some time now, Elk Lake has been open to them. Reluctantly, I hope it will so remain.

★

A community with a fine lake on its outskirts can count itself lucky. Possession of this natural gift brings problems, however.

Just how can Elk Lake be kept a good place to go for picnics, swimming, canoeing and rowboating, and fast-motor scurryings?

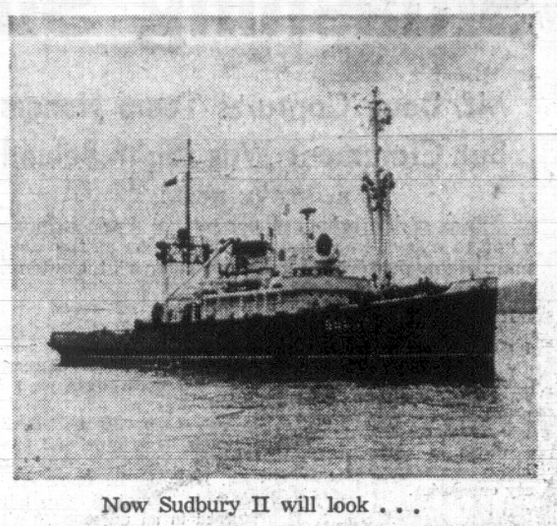
One answer, I suggest is by zoning the water in such a manner that no activity is going to be interfered with by any other.

That's a tall order, but more flags and markers, and a review of present warning signs would certainly help.

In this connection, it's as well to remember that Greater Victoria Sailing Association is clearing a site for quarters out there. Motor and hand-propelled craft will be joined by sailboats in larger numbers than the lake has carried before.

Another answer is the improved patrolling mentioned earlier. If this can be worked out on a volunteer basis, so much the better for the laden taxpayer!

But when all's said and done, the final decision must go to those who visit Elk Lake in large numbers each year. That lovely park will become pretty well what they choose to make it.



Now Sudbury II will look . . .

UGLY DUCKLING SPREADS WINGS

They're going to gussy up Sudbury II to fit her fame.

Canada's largest tug, largest tug in the Pacific, undisputed champion of western sea lanes, "Suds II" will be renovated from stem to stern and keel to masthead.

They're even going to drop the Roman numerals—she'll be just plain Sudbury the same as her predecessor who first bore that moniker as a gutsy, battered corvette in the battle of the North Atlantic.

Island Tug and Barge Ltd.—the local firm which put Victoria on the charts of world mariners with a new emphasis—said today Sudbury's refit will be complete by year's end. It will cost an estimated $1.5 million. Where it will be done is undecided yet.

She'll have her power boosted to 10,500 horsepower. Her 216-feet utilitarian lines will be smoothed and raked to make a swan of an ugly duckling.

●

Her two 20-cylinder turbo-charged engines and 10-feet-high controllable pitch screws will give her a free-running speed of more than 18 knots.

The new power and equipment will make her capable of nudging, teasing and towing just about anything afloat. Her 75-ton towing winch aft will carry close to three-quarters of a mile of 2¼-inch cable.

Sudbury will be able to cruise 10,000 miles without refuelling, in tropical or Arctic waters, while her officers and crew enjoy air-conditioned quarters.

Her lounge will have stereo and television and her messing will be cafeteria style.

Beneath her lower profile and streamlined funnel there will be wrap-around glass in the wheelhouse. Coming home on a foggy night she'll have two radar sets, radio direction finders and depth sounders. All her controls will be automated from four command positions. Her engineer will sit in a sound-proofed, air-conditioned remote control booth.

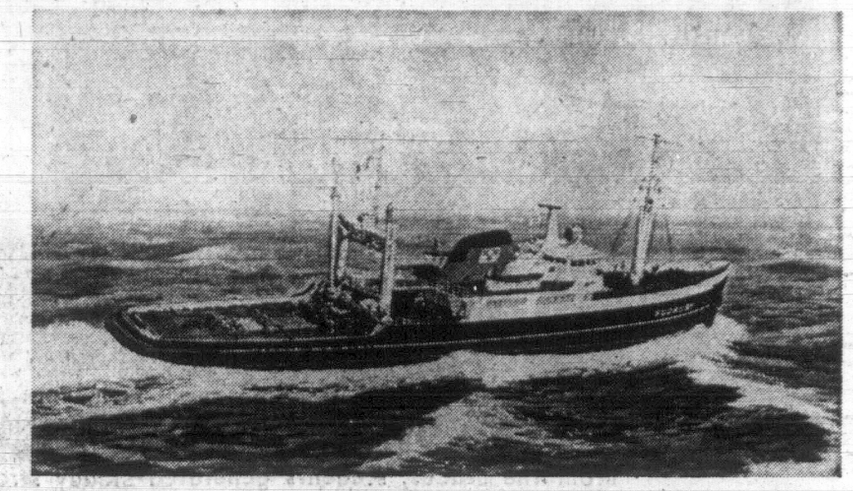
●

Island Tug's flagship was commissioned in 1960. Since then she's saved many ships from disaster — Elli, Atlantic Sun, Olympic Plam, Tainan, Lefkipos are a few that made headlines.

Last spring she put lines aboard the fire-gutted 700-footer Mandoil, loaded with a naphtha-like cargo, while she still smouldered and could have blown Suds II to China. She was nine days towing her to safety.

She's brought more work to shipyard workers here than federal contracts have done in recent years. When she steams into harbor after her refit, the company says she'll be ready and able to bring in more.

And she'll look prettier when she's taking her bows.



. . . more like the flagship and champion she is.

$14,000 Award To Soldier After Mishaps

Damages totalling $14,000 were awarded to a Victoria soldier in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton found that Gerald Albert Fay, 20, suffered fracture of two vertebrae in a car accident here. The car in which he was a passenger was driven by another soldier, Bryan Michael Clark.

'In spite of warnings and pleas to slow down, he drove, I find, at a speed of between 55 and 65 miles an hour on a 30-mile roadway into a dangerous intersection with almost tragic results," Mr. Justice Wootton said.

He awarded $6,000 damages against Clark and $8,000 in respect of a military accident Fay suffered three months later at an army camp at Wainwright, Alta.

"If he is discharged from the forces, then he should be pensionable owing to the difficulty at Wainwright," Mr. Justice Wootton said.

SAME METHOD

He added that no claim had been made against the Canadian Army for damages resulting from the accident at Wainwright.

"Even if the military authority is not so chargeable, in my view the method should be the same."

(A Victoria lawyer said today the Canadian forces cannot be sued for damages by a serviceman injured while on duty).

Patrick J. Sinnott, counsel for Fay, claimed the military accident was the result of the motor accident because Fay's back had been weakened.

COLLAPSED

"He was required to carry a 60-pound pack during manoeuvres and he collapsed under the strain," counsel said.

Mr. Justice Wootton said he did not accept the suggestion the injuries sustained at Wainwright were occasioned entirely by the injuries suffered in the motor accident.

Fay, he said, was away from his military duties for three months after the motor accident and part of that time was spent in hospital.

FULL DUTY

"The damaged vertebrae were apparently mended and he returned to his full military duties for some months before being detailed to Wainwright.

"The plaintiff swore that his back continued to pain him after the motor vehicle accident," Mrs. Justice Wootton said.

"Until his experience at Wainwright, I do not find that this man can be said to have been restored completely after the first accident . . .

"In short, he had a damaged back not fully healed after the first accident."

The action against Clark over the road accident was brought by Fay's father, Emile Fay, a Manitoba farmer.

The State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company, which insured Clark's car, was represented by Rodney Taylor.

Clark was not represented by counsel.

'Do We Really Have to Put Up With This Mess?'

For $1.50 you too can become an instant expert on pollution.

University of Victoria has published a magazine-sized book entitled "Pollution", containing the lectures of 12 specialists who gave an extension course on the subject last winter.

Its 115 pages include discussions of the types of pollution, the scientific background and the political foreground of the problem.

Uvic geography department lecturer W. R. D. Sewell, for instance, looks ahead to the shape and size of the problem in this province by the year 2000.

His conclusion: people who have growing wealth and leisure will demand their politicans solve the problem so they can get on with the business of enjoying their environment.

Sewell agrees with Resources Minister Williston's thesis that compared with other parts of this continent "B.C. seemed to be an island of purity."

He also agrees with conservationists who attack Williston for moving too slowly to keep it that way.

"But serious problems have begun to arise in this province too," says Sewell.

"The Alberni air and water problems are well known. Pollution of the Fraser River is a hazard to its own citizens and those further downstream.

"Beach pollution is occurring in many areas, notably in Vancouver, Victoria and in the Okanagan.

"Sewage disposal problems have given Victorians their greatest opportunity for debate in many years."

That debate occupies some of the pages in "Pollution" and Sewell himself sets the tone by arguing that "past policies clearly failed to curb pollution" because the problem cropped up haphazardly and no one cared.

'No Political Payoff in De-Pollution'

"As a consequence there was no political payoff from campaigning for de-pollution.

"Another possible reason is that the approach was too narrow, based mainly on health considerations and fishery considerations.

"Other impacts of waste disposal, such as the impairment of scenic amenities, were not considered."

All that is changing even now in a province of 2 million population with a 37½-hour week and per capita income of $2,500.

But the public mood-change will pick up speed as 2000 A.D. approaches when B.C. is expected to have 4.5 million people with a 20-hour work week and a per capita income of $20,000.

"Increasing affluence seem to bring with it a growing appreciation of the general environment," says Sewell.

"People begin to ask 'Do we really have to put up with this mess?' "

Uvic biology department lecturer M. A. M. Bell, who bitterly attacked civic insistence last fall on proposals to discharge raw sewage through proposed ocean outfalls for Greater Victoria's proposed sewer system, picks up this theme in his article.

He said local leaders have displayed an "inexplicable aversion" to recognizing the changing facts or looking at the probable changes coming over the 50-year life of the proposed sewer extension program.

"That the risk of pollution from this scheme is so great as to endanger the esthetic amenities of our seaside environment seems to be a risk local councils are prepared to take on our behalf," Bell says.

Polio Virus Can Live Nine Days in Sea

Dr. K. R. Thornton, director of Royal Jubilee Hospital's laboratories and a member of a medical advisory committee on pollution problems, casts doubt on the raw sewage decision on health grounds.

In his article, dealing with the medical aspects of all types of pollution, he includes the observations that polio virus "can survive from six to nine days in sea water" along with other disease-causing viruses found in human feces.

Further, he says infectious hepatitis can be spread through sewage even when dumped into salt water.

(Since publication of Uvic's "Pollution," civic authorities unanimously have hailed a provisional permit allowing them to dump 12 million gallons a day of raw sewage off Macaulay Point.

(Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen and Oak Bay Mayor Fred Hawes have demanded the same permission to dump a further six or seven million gallons daily of raw sewage from Clover Point and McMicking Point.

(However, Central Saanich and Sidney civic leaders say they are anxious to provide primary treatment before discharging their sewage through new outfalls in order to protect their citizens from pollution of recreational beaches.)

Although the "great sewage debate" runs like a thread through many of the articles in the university's new publication, the bulk of the material deals with the broader question of pollution's threat to mankind in general.

POOL WADERS DISCOVER DUMMY BOMBS

A crew from the Naval Diving Clearance Establishment, Colwood, removed two dummy bombs embedded in the sand off Coburg Peninsula on Esquimalt Lagoon Tuesday afternoon.

The 40-inch "squid" bombs were discovered by two women wading in the tidal pools off the spit.

A crew headed by Lieut. Thomas Gardner dragged the bombs ashore.

They were later identified as Mark 4 mortar bombs used for practice. They could not have exploded.

Gardner estimated they had been in the water for about eight years.

Appeals Filed Over Ford Will

Son, Cathedral Launch Actions

The 1958 will of Victoria millionaire Allan Douglas Ford, who died in 1967 at the age of 94, was again challenged at Victoria Law Courts Tuesday.

His son, John Douglas Ford of Melbourne, Australia, filed an appeal with the British Columbia Court of Appeal against the judgment of Mr. Justice Wootton who ruled in Supreme Court that Ford, Sr., was capable of making a will in May 1958.

A second appeal was filed by Christ Church Cathedral Buildings Ltd. Under the 1958 will, the cathedral would receive less benefit than from an earlier will dated June 8, 1933.

Under the 1933 will, Ford Jr. would have received most of the $1,153,792 estate left by his father. Under the 1958 will (upheld by Mr. Justice Wootton) he receives $50,000 and most of the estate goes to Victoria charities.

Both Ford and Christ Church Cathedral contend that Ford Sr., was not of sound mind, memory and understanding when he made the second will.

'DELUSION'

They also allege that Ford Sr. suffered from a "delusion" that John Ford was not his son.

Ford Jr., who is general news editor for a radio station in Melbourne, was taken to Australia by his mother at an early age. The mother has since died.

Ford Jr. flew to Victoria to attend the eight-day hearing in Victoria Law Courts last January.

Donald G. Cameron for Ford and Hugh Henderson for Christ Church Cathedral Buildings Ltd., ask that Mr. Justice Wootton's judgment be set aside on grounds that:

It was wrong in law.

It was against the evidence and the weight of evidence.

That the judge erred in holding that Ford was of competent mind and understanding when he made the 1958 will.

That the judge erred in not attaching more weight to the evidence of witnesses who told of Ford's delusion concerning his son and described some of his eccentricities.

SYMPTOM

Henderson claimed that a change in the bequest to Christ Church Cathedral in 1958 was "a symptom of the delusional illness" from which Ford was suffering, and not "merely a matter of eccentricity."

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. Mackay told how Ford took them on an outing to East Sooke in 1959. He said he was commemorating picnics he had in England in the 1890s with Sir Winston Churchill and the Viceroy of India.

Witnesses said Ford wore old-fashioned motoring clothing—cap, goggles and gauntlets and a scarf that hung down past his hips.

During the trip Ford acted the role of Churchill while Cameron was asked to play the Viceroy of India.

"Mr. Ford thoroughly enjoyed this play acting," Cameron said. "He was a born actor."

Another witness told how, when he visited Ford's 15-room house in Oak Bay, he came to the front door wearing a horned Viking helmet.

DRAMATIST

Commenting on this evidence, Mr. Justice Wootton said it was evident the testator was "a dramatist and an elderly person of some conceit who liked to impress his audience".

He agreed that Ford had a habit of elaborating and embellishing the stories he told, but added:

"All this, in my view, is an indication of old age and forgetfulness, but not necessarily incompetence. So many old persons like to command and hold the stage and they adopt many expedients to that end."

No date has yet been set for the hearing of the appeal against Mr. Justice Wootton's judgment.

LT.-COL. STEPHENSON . . . as Scottish chief in the early 1930s.

Businessman, Soldier Dies Here at 78

A man who played a prominent part in public affairs and served with the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) Regiment for many years died Monday at Mount St. Mary at 78.

Lt.-Col. F. B. J. (Brooke) Stephenson trained hundreds of officers and men while with the regiment.

He was twice battalion commander. From Nov. 26, 1930, to July 14, 1934, he commanded the regiment's First Battalion. During Second World War years, because of age, he was unable to go overseas. Instead he commanded the Third Battalion, which remained in reserve in Victoria, from Nov. 1, 1940, to April 15, 1946.

L. S. Henderson, 1068 Monterey Avenue, who joined as a subaltern in 1927 under Stephenson, who was a company commander, remembers:

"He was an extremely good company commander, thoughtful of everyone. He'd have the subalterns out at his Becher Bay place on weekends and we'd look forward to those get-togethers.

"He was also a very sound battalion commander."

ROYAL ENGINEERS

Born in Ontario, Stephenson went overseas in the First World War, serving with the 29th Vancouver Battalion and the Royal Engineers.

Well-known in insurance circles across Canada, Stephenson was managing director of Ker and Stephenson Ltd. and a director of the Pacific Coast Fire Insurance Co. He also served as president of the Real Estate Board of Victoria.

Stephenson is survived by his wife, Edna, at the family home, 2636 Currie Road; a son, Brooke, also of Victoria; two brothers, Jervis, Toronto, and Carlton, Lynchburg, Va.

Puppets and Moppets Go Together

By JOHN SLINGER

About 100 elementary school kids sat in a darkened Lochside School auditorium this morning grooving on puppets.

A whole peanut galleryful that had been weaned on cathode ray tubes; that supposedly figure the world turns inside a 24-inch screen; that hopes to grow up some day to be super-cool 10-year-olds; thought puppets were an absolute gas.

They giggled, they howled, they hooted and cheered and booed and hissed like nobody ever told them that it was just make-believe.

"Hey," shouted a little girl with blonde pigtails to a little girl with none as they hustled back to their neat classroom with the printed letters on the wall. "Hey, did you see that princess come out of the cloud of smoke?"

Cloud of smoke indeed. This teeny mouse went skittering across the stage and, Ka-blam! disappeared in a cloud of smoke to emerge as a princess.

And a whole bunch of little girls sitting there in the dark went, "Oooh!"

Puppeteer Horst Bohme isn't surprised that little girls are impressed by mice that turn into princesses.

He isn't surprised that the littlest kids in the front row stand up and scream "No, no!" when Casper the hero is about to drink poison-plant tea brewed by the ugly witch who guards the magic flower.

And those kids know full well if they hadn't been there Casper would have downed the poison-plant tea and would have died or something.

They saved him and could care less whether the thing is make-believe.

"Their vision isn't too blurred for feeling—for having the feeling," said Bohme, a former Bavarian school puppeteer who is trooping his Little World Theatre around the southern Island.

Bohme and his sons, aged 18 and 19, performed The Magic Flower this afternoon at Sansbury Elementary in Saanichton. Thursday they perform three times at Duncan, Friday it's four performances at Lake Cowichan.

The theatre's motto: "As the sun colors flowers, so does art color life," is as simple as the play which, as Bohme explained to the children, "has three acts. One at the beginning, one in the middle and one on the end."

His purpose in the school tour is to show teachers how involved children can become with a puppet presentation and he suggests that the little dolls — made of socks and sticks and potatoes and paper — can be an effective teaching aid.

"Children learn much faster with puppets," said the German-born Bohme who, with his wife, started the theatre 20 years ago. He estimates they have played 150 schools throughout British Columbia since October.
